English Verb Drills is designed to help learners develop the skills that promote effective usage of verbs. It is a vehicle for students of all levels to review and drill conjugational forms, tenses, voice, mood, and verb usage.

Students of language often struggle with the conjugations of verbs. This is particularly true of European languages. One fortunate exception is the English language. Except for the third-person singular conjugation of most verbs, there are no conjugational endings to be considered in the present tense. In the third-person singular, most verbs simply require the ending -s.

Although the conjugation of English verbs is a relatively simple matter, there are other aspects of verbs that require explanation, illustration, and practice. The two most significant of these aspects are verb irregularities and verb usage. This book identifies the varieties of verb irregularities and provides abundant practice with them. The patterns of verb usage are also explained and illustrated and accompanied by numerous exercises for practice.

At the end of the book is a Mastery Check for learners to verify the development of their skill with all the aspects of verbs provided in the entire book. Besides an Answer Key, there is a useful appendix at the end of the book that provides a complete list of irregular English verbs.

English Verb Drills can serve as an important study aid to all those who wish to perfect their knowledge of English verbs. The book is equally suitable in an English-language classroom or for self-study and is an effective tool for clarifying the complexities and idiosyncrasies of the English verb.

Verbs in the Present and Past Tenses

A tense tells in what time the action of a verb takes place: the present, the past, or the future.

The Present Tense

The base form of a verb is called the infinitive. Infinitives are composed of the particle word to and the verb: to sing, to dance, to develop, and so on. In the conjugation of a verb in the present tense, the particle word to is omitted. The ending -s is added to the verb in the third-person singular.

Pronoun	to sleep	to hurry	to belong
I	sleep	hurry	belong
you	sleep	hurry	belong
he / she / it	sleeps	hurries	belongs
we	sleep	hurry	belong
they	sleep	hurry	belong

Verbs that end in -y change to -ie- in the third-person singular conjugation and then add the ending -s. However, if the final -y of a verb is preceded by a vowel (a, e, i, o, u), the -y does not change to -ie-.

Pronoun	to marry	to try	to fly	to say
I	marry	try	fly	say
you	marry	try	fly	say
he / she / it	marries	tries	flies	says
we	marry	try	fly	say
they	marry	try	fly	say

For verbs that end in a sound such as -s, -z, -ch, -tch, or -sh, add the ending -es instead of -s in the third-person singular conjugation of the present tense.

Pronoun	to miss	to catch	to rush
I	miss	catch	rush
you	miss	catch	rush
he / she / it	miss es	catch es	rush es
we	miss	catch	rush
they	miss	catch	rush

The ending -es is also used as the third-person singular present tense ending for verbs that end in vowels. For example:

I do / he does

I go / he goes

If a verb already ends in -e, just add -s:

I save / he saves

I believe / he believes

If a noun is used in place of a third-person pronoun, a plural noun will require no ending on the verb, and a singular noun will require the ending -s:

the men sing / the man sings

boys run / a boy runs

This conjugational usage with nouns follows the pattern of the plural and singular third-person plural and singular pronouns:

they sing / he, she, it sings

they run / he, she, it runs

Exercise 1

Fill in the blank with the appropriate present tense form of the infinitive provided in parentheses. For example:

John asks his father for some advice. (to ask)

1. I never _____ about things I don't understand. (to speak)
2. Mary and I often _____ to the radio in the evening. (to listen)
3. She seldom _____ to keep her room tidy. (to forget)
4. My brother _____ about getting into college. (to worry)
5. The little boy _____ when he doesn't get his way. (to cry)
6. You never _____ my questions directly. (to answer)

7. We _____ Aunt Helen with a beautiful birthday cake. (to surprise)
8. The dog _____ the large bone in the backyard. (to bury)
9. The brothers _____ all their money on video games. (to spend)
10. It usually _____ rather humid in the midafternoon. (to become)
11. They _____ the documents then quickly _____ his office. (to sign / to leave)
12. Bill _____ to borrow my car, but he never _____ me his. (to like / to lend)
13. He _____ the party and _____ for it with his credit card. (to arrange / to pay)
14. I _____ we change the rules and _____ Jim to join our club. (to suggest / to allow)
15. Mark _____ the girl behind the barn and suddenly _____ her. (to catch / to kiss)

To Be and To Have

Two English verbs need to be considered separately because they have a slightly more complicated conjugation in the present tense. These verbs are to be and to have. The conjugation of these two verbs is significant because, besides being able to function alone in a sentence, they can also serve as auxiliaries of other verbs and in tenses other than the present tense.

Pronoun	to be	to have
I	am	have you	are	have
he / she / it	is	has
we	are	have they	are	have

Exercise 2

Fill in the blank with the appropriate present tense form of to be.

1. We _____ in the dining room at the table.
2. My sister _____ a rather accomplished pianist.
3. Mark and I _____ both on the soccer team.

4. I _____ interested in learning Arabic.
5. He _____ one of my favorite actors.
6. You _____ my best friend.
7. The women of the village _____ on their way to the capital.
8. It _____ wonderful to see you again.
9. She _____ anxious to go to the dance.
10. They _____ the newest members of our organization.

Fill in the blank with the appropriate present tense form of to have.

11. They _____ no time for parties.
12. I rarely _____ enough money.
13. Mr. Roberts _____ an interesting coin collection.
14. He _____ a big surprise for his wife.
15. You _____ a lot of explaining to do.
16. We _____ something to show you.
17. It _____ absolutely no meaning for me.
18. Margaret and I _____ a date to go out for dinner.
19. She _____ my new digital camera.
20. Professor Hill _____ a problem with these lecture dates.

The Past Tense

The English past tense is composed of regular verbs and irregular verbs. Forming the past tense of regular verbs is quite simple: drop the particle word to from an infinitive and then add the suffix -ed. Verbs that end in -y change to -i- and then add the ending -ed. All persons have the same past tense form.

Pronoun	to look	to marry	to try
I	looked	married	tried
you	looked	married	tried
he / she / it	looked	married	tried
we	looked	married	tried
they	looked	married	tried

However, if the final -y of a verb is preceded by a vowel (a, e, i, o, u), the -y does not change to -i-. In most cases, the suffix -ed is simply added to the verb. Following are a few exceptions:

Pronoun	to play	to pay	to say
I	played	paid	said
you	played	paid	said
he / she / it	played	paid	said
we	played	paid	said
they	played	paid	said

Exercise 3

Fill in the blank of each sentence with the present tense conjugation of the verb provided in parentheses. Then rewrite the sentence in the past tense. For example:

The children play in the garden. (to play)

The children played in the garden.

1. My cousin _____ my lawn mower. (to borrow)

2. We usually _____ our relatives at holiday time. (to visit)

3. She _____ for dinner with a personal check. (to pay)

4. I _____ the boys and girls to some ice cream. (to treat)

5. He never _____ my instructions. (to follow)

6. Mr. Jennings _____ a meeting for 5 P.M. (to call)

7. No one _____ my sister's chocolate cake. (to try)

8. Rick and Bill _____ that they want to be astronauts. (to say)

9. They _____ to take a trip to South America. (to plan)

10. It _____ into a complicated problem. (to develop)

Irregular Verbs in the Past Tense

The past tense of irregular verbs is more complex. Some verbs, for example, look identical in both the present and past tenses (with the exception of the third-person singular of the present tense). Some verbs of this type are to cut, to let, to rid, to bet, to beat, to burst, to fit, and to hit. (See the appendix for a complete list of irregular verbs.) Let's compare the present and past tense of such verbs in the first- and third-person singular.

Infinitive	Present Tense	Past Tense
to cut	I cut / he cuts	I cut / he cut to hit	I hit / he hits	I hit / he hit to let	I let / he lets	I let / he let

When just looking at the phrase you bet, you cannot tell which tense the verb is in. The context and meaning of the sentence provide the information that tells the tense of the verb. For example:

Yesterday I bet that our team would win. ("yesterday" = past tense)

She sets the clock. ("sets" = conjugated for third-person singular of the present tense)

They pretend to lose and let me win. ("pretend" = present tense; therefore, "let" = present tense)

Exercise 4

Using the subject and verb provided, write a sentence in the present tense. Then rewrite the sentence in the past tense. For example:

she / to let

She lets me use her computer.

She let me use her computer.

1. he / to hit

2. it / to burst

3. I / to cut

4. Mark / to fit

5. we / to beat

6. she / to rid

7. Ms. Lopez / to set

8. you / to put

9. they / to wed

10. my brother-in-law / to quit

Irregular Verbs That Change the Base Form

The past tense of many other irregular verbs is created by making a change in the base form of the verb. This usually occurs with a vowel change—for example, to come → came, to see → saw, to know → knew. Let's look at some high-frequency verbs and how they change from the present tense to the past tense.

Infinitive	Present Tense	Past Tense
to speak	I speak / he speaks	I spoke / he spoke to drive	I drive / he drives	I drove / he drove to fall	I fall / he falls	I fell / he fell

Not all irregular verbs make only a vowel change in the past tense. Let's look at some that form the past tense by some other irregularity, possibly in addition to a vowel change.

Infinitive	Present Tense	Past Tense
to sell	I sell / he sells	I sold / he sold to send	I send / he sends	I sent / he sent to fly	I fly / he flies	I flew / he flew

The verbs to be and to have in the past tense both have an irregular conjugation. Let's look at the full past tense conjugation of these two important verbs.

Pronoun	to be	to have
I	was	had
you	were	had
he / she / it	was	had
we	were	had
they	were	had

The verb to go makes a radical change in the past tense.

Infinitive	Present Tense	Past Tense
to go	I go / he goes	I went / he went

See the appendix for a complete list of verbs that have an irregular past tense formation.

Exercise 5

Write the infinitives provided in the present and past tenses to agree with the pronoun he.

1. to show _____ _____
2. to give _____ _____

3. to rid	_____	_____
4. to belong	_____	_____
5. to run	_____	_____
6. to make	_____	_____
7. to send	_____	_____
8. to know	_____	_____
9. to tell	_____	_____
10. to explain	_____	_____
11. to wait	_____	_____
12. to please	_____	_____
13. to bring	_____	_____
14. to annoy	_____	_____
15. to pass	_____	_____
16. to win	_____	_____
17. to go	_____	_____
18. to fall	_____	_____
19. to cost	_____	_____
20. to ride	_____	_____
21. to drink	_____	_____
22. to eat	_____	_____
23. to beat	_____	_____
24. to creep	_____	_____
25. to meet	_____	_____

Exercise 6

Rewrite the following present tense sentences in the past tense.

1. Martin speaks with his new professor.

2. I am in a very important meeting.

3. My wife buys a new dress or skirt every month.

4. No one understands his dialect.

5. The lawyers have several contracts to discuss.

6. The poor woman screams in pain.

7. The train leaves at exactly 10 P.M.

8. You are one of the strongest athletes in the school.

9. They build bridges and tunnels.

10. Someone takes them for a drive in the country.

11. Their son grows another inch or two.

12. She has a basket full of colored eggs.

13. We sleep until 9:30 A.M.

14. The butcher weighs the three filets of fish.

15. Mr. Jackson tells another funny story.

Verbs Followed by Infinitives

Perhaps you noticed in some of the example sentences that certain verbs conjugated in the present or the past tense can be followed by another verb in its infinitive form. Some verbs that can be followed by an infinitive are to attempt, to hope, to forget, to remember, to try, and to want. Compare the similarity of how some of these verbs are used with direct objects and infinitives.

Direct Object: Jack attempted a leap from one cliff to another.

Infinitive: Jack attempted to leap from one cliff to another.

Direct Object: She forgets her keys and purse.

Infinitive: She forgets to take her keys and purse.

Direct Object: I remember the last time I saw her.

Infinitive: I remember to send her a birthday card.

Direct Object: He tries some tapioca pudding.

Infinitive: He tries to swallow some tapioca pudding.

Direct Object: Nobody wants cold pizza.

Infinitive: Nobody wants to eat cold pizza.

Exercise 7

Rewrite each sentence, changing the direct object to any appropriate infinitive phrase. For example:

She attempted a difficult move.

She attempted to do a backflip.

1. Bill wanted a piece of pizza.

2. No one remembers her birthday.

3. I tried a spoonful of the soup.

4. Uncle James forgot his wallet again.

5. Tina attempts a dangerous trick.

Auxiliaries of Tense

In the present and past tenses, verbs are conjugated in a way that infers a present action (he speaks) or a past action (he spoke). But in the other tenses, auxiliaries are conjugated and verbs appear as infinitives or past participles. Infinitives are the base form of a verb and are often preceded by the particle word to (to go or go, to be or be). Regular past participles end in -ed (have looked, have talked) and irregular past participles take a variety of different forms (have seen, have met, have spoken, and so on). The three auxiliaries that help to form the other tenses are will, shall, and have.

Will and Shall

Will

The verb to will has a limited use as a transitive verb. It means that someone exercises his desire to do something or to use his own will. It can be used in various tenses but tends to be used in modern English in the present and past.

God wills it, and therefore it must be done.

The sickly man willed himself well.

But this verb's primary use in modern English is as one of the auxiliaries of the future tense. It is followed by an infinitive (with the particle word to omitted). It has the same form with all persons.

I will speak

you will understand

he / she / it will answer

we will learn

you will help

they will travel

Shall

The verb shall is the other auxiliary of the future tense. It is followed by an infinitive (with the particle word to omitted). It has the same form with all persons.

I shall write	we shall overcome
you shall study	you shall remain silent
he / she / it shall begin	they shall stand

There is a difference between will and shall: traditionally, shall is used with the first-person singular and plural, and will is used with the second- and third-persons singular and plural.

I shall speak	we shall learn
you will understand	you will help
he / she / it will answer	they will travel

However, when the future tense infers a promise, threat, or command or is intended for emphasis, the two verbs are used in just the opposite manner.

I will speak	we will learn
you shall understand	you shall help
he / she / it shall answer	they shall travel

Remember that a noun or pronoun combined with and I can be replaced by the pronoun we: Mr. Smith and I = we / she and I = we. This will affect your choice of will or shall.

This is important: over time, the contemporary tendency has been to use will in place of shall with all persons in the future tense.

Exercise 8

Rewrite the following sentences in the “traditional” future tense. Then rewrite them as a “promise.”

1. He plays the piano.

2. I study English.

3. We buy a new house.

4. She loves the book.

5. Mark makes no mistakes.

6. The boys help them.

7. No one is there.

8. You eat enough.

9. It needs work.

10. They practice daily.

11. Tina receives the money.

12. I repair the radio.

13. The woman kisses him.

14. We drive slowly.

15. You stand up.

16. She says nothing.

17. Everyone gives ten dollars.

18. Bill and I spend less money.

19. It breaks down.

20. He pretends.

Exercise 9

Rewrite the following past tense phrases in the “contemporary” future tense.

1. she ate _____

2. I looked _____

3. no one understood _____

4. Mr. Wills found _____
5. we spoke _____
6. Jim and I went _____
7. she heard _____
8. they jumped _____
9. Ms. Garcia cut _____
10. you were _____
11. the men drank _____
12. it seemed _____
13. something happened _____
14. nothing stopped _____
15. he saw _____
16. you bought _____
17. I thought _____
18. we hurried _____
19. the child cried _____
20. it had _____

When the future tense is expressed as a question, the auxiliary is the first element of the future tense sentence, and, in most cases, the “traditional” use of will and shall must be used. For example:

First-Person Singular	Shall I help?	Shall I leave?
Second-Person Singular	Will you help?	Will you leave?
Third-Person Singular	Will he help?	Will he leave?
	Will she help?	Will she leave?
	Will it help?	Will it leave?
First-Person Plural	Shall we help?	Shall we leave?
Second-Person Plural	Will you help?	Will you leave?
Third-Person Plural	Will they help?	Will they leave?

If will and shall are not used in this way in questions, the questions sound awkward: “Will I help?” is awkward; “Shall you leave?” is also awkward.

Exercise 10

Rewrite the following present and past tense sentences as future tense questions.

1. He spends a lot of money. _____
2. They hurried home. _____
3. I buy this blouse. _____
4. Donald studied here. _____
5. Bill was in Europe. _____
6. We helped them. _____
7. My cousins live in New York. _____
8. You lost your wallet again. _____
9. She fell down. _____
10. It smells good. _____
11. The boys and I play checkers. _____
12. You spell it correctly. _____
13. A woman becomes president. _____
14. Someone forgot this book. _____
15. I am your partner. _____
16. You and I work together. _____
17. My answer was right. _____
18. They swam to shore. _____
19. Her questions were difficult. _____
20. We played in a band. _____
21. Sarah became a doctor. _____
22. He sang in the choir. _____
23. The plant grew fast. _____
24. Someone helps me. _____
25. That hurts. _____

Have

When to have is used as a transitive verb, its conjugation is as follows:

I have	we have
you have	you have
he / she / it has	they have

Because to have is a transitive verb, it can be followed by a direct object.

I have a story to tell you.
She has a problem with her computer.

But when a conjugation of to have is followed by a past participle, it forms one of the perfect tenses: the present perfect tense, the past perfect tense, or the future perfect tense. Regular past participles look like the past tense; they have the ending -ed: jumped, cried, looked, and so on. Irregular participles are formed in different ways. Following are some examples with high-frequency verbs:

Infinitive	Have + Irregular Past Participle
to bring	have brought to cut	have cut
to go	have gone
to see	have seen
to send	have sent
to speak	have spoken
to take	have taken
to write	have written

See the appendix for a list of all irregular past participles.

The Present Perfect Tense

When the auxiliary have is conjugated in the present tense and is followed by a regular or an irregular past participle, the tense is called the present perfect tense. It is only the third-person singular where the auxiliary have changes to has.

I have learned you have taken he has been she has drunk
it has fallen

we have understood you have noticed they have found

Use the present perfect tense to say that an action began in the past and has continued until the present. For example:

He has spoken English for two years. (He began to speak English two years ago. He still speaks English.)

Exercise 11

Rewrite each of the following phrases in the present perfect tense.

1. I find _____
2. they begin _____
3. Mark thinks _____
4. she studies _____
5. we arrange _____
6. it breaks _____
7. you pretend _____
8. he is _____
9. Ms. Brown forgets _____
10. each boy tries _____
11. Tom and I dance _____
12. the woman knit _____
13. someone shouts _____
14. I know _____
15. you come _____
16. it rains _____
17. no one remembers _____
18. we lend _____
19. someone knocks _____

20. it bleeds _____
21. you have _____
22. they are _____
23. Maria allows _____
24. we spend _____
25. it costs _____

The Past Perfect Tense

The past perfect tense consists of the past tense of have followed by a regular or an irregular participle.

I had said	we had borrowed you had broken	you had written
he had changed	they had been she had had
it had started

This tense is used when an action began in the past and also ended in the past. For example:

He had spoken English for two years. (Ten years ago he began to speak English. Eight years ago he stopped speaking English.)

Exercise 12

Rewrite the following present and past tense phrases in the past perfect tense.

1. we became _____
2. I cried _____
3. you follow _____
4. someone hit _____
5. they called _____
6. the boys play _____
7. she sings _____
8. it rang _____
9. the clouds move _____

10. I drive _____
11. the girls and I laugh _____
12. it stormed _____
13. he marries _____
14. John weds _____
15. we fly _____

The Future Perfect Tense

The future perfect tense consists of will or shall followed by have and a regular or an irregular past participle.

I will (shall) have spoken you will have been
he will have noticed she will have phoned it will have happened

we will (shall) have made you will have had
they will have stolen

This tense is used when an action began in the past and will end in the future. For example:

He will have graduated by June. (He began his studies in the past. In the future month of June he will graduate.)

Use the “contemporary” or “traditional” rules for will and shall with the perfect tenses.

Exercise 13

Rewrite the following present and past tense phrases in the future perfect tense.

1. my landlady said _____
2. you bargain _____
3. they travel _____
4. she spends _____
5. someone reminded _____
6. it was _____

7. Martin has _____
8. I belong _____
9. we sold _____
10. life is _____
11. my daughter became _____
12. it ends _____
13. they died _____
14. an explorer climbs _____
15. he knew _____

Adding Infinitive Phrases

Just as infinitives and infinitive phrases can follow certain verbs in the present and past tenses, the same verbs in the perfect and future tenses can be followed by infinitives and infinitive phrases as well. Some of these verbs are:

hope	forget
try	attempt
remember	manage seem	arrange want	agree appear	promise
pretend	learn prepare	refuse
fail	learn

In the perfect and future tenses, such verbs follow the pattern of this example:

Present Perfect: I have forgotten to lock the door.

Past Perfect: I had forgotten to lock the door.

Future Perfect: I will have forgotten to lock the door.

Future: I will forget to lock the door.

Exercise 14

Complete each sentence with any appropriate infinitive phrase. For example:

She had hoped to climb to the top of the mountain.

1. Somebody will remember to _____.
2. We have forgotten to _____.
3. I have tried to _____.
4. Somebody has attempted to _____.
5. Will he manage to _____?
6. The weather had seemed to _____.
7. She will arrange to _____.
8. I had wanted to _____.
9. The lawyers have agreed to _____.
10. You have failed to _____.
11. We have promised to _____.
12. The boys will have learned to _____.
13. The women will ask to _____.
14. Several of them had prepared to _____.
15. I will have failed to _____.

Linking and Intransitive Verbs

Linking Verbs

To Be

Linking verbs combine the subject of a sentence with an adjective, a noun, or a pronoun that follows the verb. This occurs most frequently with the verb to be.

I am cold

you are alone

he is talented

she is a lawyer

it is you

we are happy

you are my friend

they are sad

The same structure remains as the verb changes tenses.

Present: he is glad

Past: he was glad

Present Perfect: he has been glad

Past Perfect: he had been glad

Future Perfect: he will have been glad

Future: he will be glad

In informal style, it is common to use an objective case pronoun after to be. In formal style, subjective case pronouns are used.

Subjective Case

It is I.

Objective Case

It is me.

Exercise 15

Complete each sentence with any appropriate adjective.

1. Ms. Thomas is _____.
2. I am very _____.
3. You will be _____.
4. Someone was _____ about your answer.
5. It has been quite _____.
6. We will always be _____.
7. She has never been _____ with this apartment.

Complete the following sentences with any appropriate noun phrase.

8. My boss was _____ of the committee.
9. Tom and I have been _____ for many years.
10. She will be _____.
11. I always wanted to be _____.
12. We are _____.
13. They were _____.

Complete the following sentences with any appropriate pronoun.

14. Bill is not _____.
15. It was _____.

Other Linking Verbs

Other linking verbs work in the same manner as to be: they combine the subject of a sentence with an adjective that follows the verb. Some of these linking verbs can also be combined with nouns and pronouns that follow the verb. The verbs that are followed only by adjectives are:

appear	seem feel	smell
grow	sound
look	stay
prove	taste

Each of these ten verbs can be followed by an adjective that modifies the subject of the sentence, and this can occur in any tense and with auxiliaries.

The man appears ill.
She feels unhappy.
The sky has grown dark.
His skin will look better tomorrow.
Their theory proves wrong.
The man seemed impatient.
Her cookies have always smelled so good.
The piano will sound better after tuning.
She wants to stay young.
The soup tasted delicious.

Exercise 16

Complete each of the following sentences with any appropriate adjective.

1. The flowers smell so _____.
2. No one can stay _____ forever.
3. One of the men appeared very _____.
4. I have always felt _____ when visiting you.
5. The moon grows _____ as the clouds come in.
6. This salad tastes _____.
7. Their rock band never sounded _____.
8. His answer proved _____.
9. Their new car looked _____.
10. Mr. Phillips always seems so _____.

Two linking verbs (to become and to remain) can be followed by adjectives, nouns, and on rare occasions pronouns and can be used in any tense and with auxiliaries. For example:

The weather became awful. (adjective)
Betty wants to become a lawyer. (noun)

The lake remained calm. (adjective)
Bill hoped to remain an architect. (noun)

The verb to seem can sometimes be followed by a modified noun.

That seems a strange statement to me.

Exercise 17

Complete the following sentences twice: once with an adjective or adjective phrase and once with a noun or noun phrase.

1. This will become _____ for them.
This will become _____ for them.
2. Mary became _____.
Mary became _____.
3. My father wanted to remain _____.
My father wanted to remain _____.
4. She remained _____.
She remained _____.

Linking Verbs as Transitive Verbs

Some of the linking verbs can also be used as transitive verbs. That is, they do not combine a subject with an adjective that follows them, but, instead, they take a direct object. Compare the following sentences. Each direct object is underlined.

Linking Verb

She feels happy.
The cake smelled burned.
It grows dark.
The music sounds loud.
It proved wrong.
The soup tastes salty.

Transitive Verb

She feels the fabric.
Bill smelled the flowers.
They grow tropical plants.
He sounds the alarm.
She proved the theory.
Mom tastes the soup.

It is easy to determine whether these verbs are used as linking verbs or as transitive verbs. Replace the verb with an appropriate form of to be. If the sentence still makes sense, the verb is a linking verb. If it makes no sense, the verb is a transitive verb. For example:

Jim felt very lonely. → Jim was very lonely. (makes sense = linking verb)
Jim felt a pain in his arm. → Jim was a pain in his arm. (makes no sense = transitive verb)
The jam will taste sweet. → The jam will be sweet. (makes sense = linking verb)
I will taste the jam. → I will be the jam. (makes no sense = transitive verb)

Exercise 18

In the blank provided, write the letter L if the verb in the sentence is a linking verb. Write the letter T if the verb in the sentence is a transitive verb.

- _____ 1. Someone has been very naughty.
- _____ 2. My sister wants to become a doctor.
- _____ 3. I immediately smelled her perfume.
- _____ 4. This bed has never felt uncomfortable before.
- _____ 5. Grandmother remained very angry at us.
- _____ 6. She has been a teacher for many years.
- _____ 7. We need to sound the fire alarm.
- _____ 8. My glass of milk tastes sour.
- _____ 9. I can smell the smoke from their campfire.
- _____ 10. In June it usually becomes rainy.
- _____ 11. The cellar always appeared dirty.
- _____ 12. You seem rather nervous.
- _____ 13. My aunt remained a pilot until she was sixty.
- _____ 14. The necklace proved worthless.
- _____ 15. You will never be a successful actor.
- _____ 16. They grow only wheat and corn here.
- _____ 17. Those puppies looked so unhealthy.
- _____ 18. The guards will stay alert.
- _____ 19. It was you!
- _____ 20. The tone of her voice sounds lovely.

Intransitive Verbs

Transitive verbs can take a direct or an indirect object. Intransitive verbs cannot. They can be followed by adverbs and prepositional phrases, but they can never take an object. The objects in the following sentences are underlined.

Verbs with an Object

Bill borrowed his father's car.

I lost my new gloves.

She signed all the documents.

Verbs Having No Object

Bill ran into the street.

I fell over Bobby's wagon.

She flew from New York to London.

However, some verbs can act as either a transitive or an intransitive verb. Let's look at some verbs that can be either transitive or intransitive.

Transitive Verb

He ran the new machinery.

She flew her own plane.

I want to drive your new car.

Intransitive Verb

He ran around the track.

She flew there on a plane.

I want to drive to Denver.

A few verbs come in pairs: one verb in the pair is transitive, and the other verb is intransitive. The verbs are shown in bold.

Transitive Verb

Carmen lays the books on the table.

We set the vase on the piano.

Intransitive Verb

The books lie next to the computer.

The little boy sits under the table.

In all cases, when you are determining whether a verb is transitive or intransitive, it is the use of an object with the verb that is the clue that it is transitive. Let's look at some sentences that illustrate intransitive verbs. Note the regular use of adverbs and prepositional phrases in these sentences.

The man died after a long illness.

The guests will arrive at 8 P.M.

My sister has come home for the holidays.

They excitedly hurried up the steps.

Someday we will journey to Mars.

The woman had swum across the English Channel.

Tom always sleeps so late.

Exercise 19

In the blank provided, write the letter T if the sentence has a transitive verb. Write the letter I if the sentence has an intransitive verb.

- ___ 1. We always take the train into the city.
- ___ 2. Someone slapped me on the back.
- ___ 3. It rains every evening.
- ___ 4. Jake stopped the car in front of a store.
- ___ 5. A stranger came up to the door.
- ___ 6. I sit next to her bed.
- ___ 7. The boys broke the window.
- ___ 8. Tina wants to travel to Asia.
- ___ 9. He thought about his girlfriend back home.
- ___ 10. They will drive to Los Angeles.
- ___ 11. Mark sped down the highway.
- ___ 12. You know nothing about my problems.
- ___ 13. Tim and I had never run so fast before.
- ___ 14. The artist painted my portrait.
- ___ 15. All the plants died from the cold.
- ___ 16. Professor Wilde shook my hand slowly.
- ___ 17. I touched her warm skin.
- ___ 18. The little boy suddenly fell from his chair.
- ___ 19. They went home.
- ___ 20. It snowed during the night.
- ___ 21. Somehow Marie got another cold.
- ___ 22. A parade of ants crept across the kitchen floor.
- ___ 23. Dad looks out the window.
- ___ 24. The children want a puppy.
- ___ 25. Bobby wants to go to the circus.

Modal Auxiliaries

A modal auxiliary tells the mode or manner in which an action is performed. The mode or manner suggests a degree of obligation, enjoyment, or desire to carry out the action. Modal auxiliaries fall into two categories: (1) those that are followed by an infinitive that includes the particle word to and (2) those that omit the particle word to. For example:

I have to go home.

I must go home.

Modals and Infinitives with To

The following list of modal auxiliaries contains those that are followed by an infinitive with to. The meaning provided shows the degree of obligation, enjoyment, or desire to carry out the action of an accompanying infinitive.

Modal Auxiliary	Meaning
be able to	have the ability
be allowed to	have permission
be supposed to	moderate obligation
be to	moderate obligation
have got to	emphasized strong obligation have to	strong obligation
like to	enjoy an action
need to	necessary obligation
ought to	moderate obligation
used to	regular action in the past want to	desire
wish to	desire

The modals that are part of a phrase that begins with be conjugate only the verb be.

Pronoun	be allowed to	be supposed to	be to
I	am allowed to	am supposed to	am to you	are allowed to	are supposed to	are to he / she / it	is allowed to	is supposed to	is to we	are allowed to	are supposed to	are to they	are allowed to	are supposed to	are to

The other modals conjugate the initial verb in the phrase. Here are some examples:

Pronoun	have to	need to	want to
I	have to	need to	want to you	have to	need to	want to he / she / it	has to	needs to	wants to we	have to	need to	want to
they	have to	need to	want to

A word of caution: do not confuse the three uses of to have:

Transitive Verb: He has a new job. (have followed by a direct object)

Perfect Tense Auxiliary: We have arrived. (have followed by past participle)

Modal Auxiliary: We have to stay home. (have followed by infinitive)

Various modals can be used with the same infinitive phrase. The modal changes the mode or manner of the action of the accompanying infinitive—not its meaning.

I am allowed to play the piano.

I am supposed to play the piano.

I have to play the piano.

I wish to play the piano.

Exercise 20

Combine the modal auxiliaries provided with the phrases in parentheses. Keep the same subject in the phrase in parentheses. For example:

I go home for supper. (be to / want to)

I am to go home for supper.

I want to go home for supper.

1. She stays with her mother. (be supposed to / need to / wish to)

2. They perform in a circus. (want to / used to / have got to)

3. You memorize the poem. (have to / be to / ought to)

4. We relax in the garden. (like to / be allowed to / need to)

5. Jim is a good cook. (wish to / want to / be supposed to)

Tenses

Most modal auxiliaries can occur in other tenses. Look at the following examples given with the pronoun he.

Tense	be allowed to	have to	need to
Present	he is allowed to	he has to	he needs to
Past	he was allowed to	he had to	he needed to
Present Perfect	he has been allowed to	he has had to	he has needed to
Past Perfect	he had been allowed to	he had had to	he had needed to Future	he will be allowed to	he will have to	he will need to

Some of the modal auxiliaries cannot be formed in all the tenses. Ought to and be to should only be used in the present and past tenses. These modals sound awkward in other tenses.

Present: You ought to stay home tonight.

Past: You ought to have stayed home tonight.

Present: She is to hurry home.

Past: She was to hurry home.

Notice in the past tense meaning that ought to is followed by have and a past participle. This occurs with any accompanying phrase that begins with have and a past participle.

She ought to have spent less money.

We ought to have gone home earlier.

The modal used to always infers an action that has taken place regularly in the past. It cannot be used in other tenses.

I used to live in Australia.

My cousin used to work in that factory.

There used to be a drugstore on that corner.

A word of caution: you must distinguish the use of used to from two similar verbs: be used to and used to be. Be used to is a synonym for be accustomed to. Used to be is a synonym for formerly was / were. Let's look at some examples.

I used to speak German. (modal auxiliary showing a regular action in the past)

I am used to life in America. ("I am accustomed to life in America.")

I used to be a fireman. ("I was formerly a fireman.")

The modal have got to sounds awkward in other tenses. Use it in the present tense to emphasize the obligation inferred by have to.

Normal Obligation

You have to help me.

I have to rush home.

Emphatic Obligation

You have got to help me.

I have got to rush home.

Exercise 21

Rewrite the following phrases in the tenses provided. If a modal cannot be written in a given tense, place an X in that blank.

1. I am supposed to play.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

2. She wants to learn.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

3. They ought to hurry.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

4. No one likes to eat it.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

5. We are allowed to listen.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

6. Betty needs to rest.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

7. Someone has to help.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

8. Mr. Lee used to work here.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

9. You are to help them.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

10. Someone has got to listen.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

Modals with Infinitives That Omit To

The modal auxiliaries that omit the particle word to from an infinitive are listed here:

can could had better (better) may might must should would

They combine with infinitives in the same way that will and shall do.

He will go home.

We shall speak with her.

The modals of this type do not have conjugational endings. They are identical in all the persons.

Pronoun	can	might	should
I	can	might	should you	can	might	should
he / she / it	can	might	should
we	can	might	should they	can	might	should

Tenses

These modals tend to be used in the present tense, but many of them have a subjunctive mood meaning. That is, they express what might be a possibility or a probability in the future or if a certain condition is met. And they are in reality the past tense of other auxiliaries.

Present	Past
can	could may	might shall	should will	would

In sentences they are used like this:

I can understand you. (present tense)

I could understand you. (past tense)

I could understand you if you spoke louder. (subjunctive “if you spoke louder” = a condition)

That may be true. (present tense)

That might be true. (past tense)

He might return if you called him. (subjunctive “if you called him” = a condition)

We shall hurry there. (future tense)

We should hurry there. (subjunctive = the probable thing to do)

No one will know. (future tense)

No one would know. (subjunctive = the probable outcome)

Must and had better (often said as better) are used only in the present tense.

You must help me.

You had better help me. (You better help me.)

A word of caution: do not confuse the normal use of the modal must (strong obligation) with its idiomatic form must be + present participle. Compare the following pairs of sentences:

I must remain at home tonight. (I have to remain at home tonight.)

I must be dreaming. (I feel that this is a dream and not real.)

You must pay your bill. (You have to pay your bill.)

You must be joking. (I feel you are not serious. This is a joke.)

Most of the modal auxiliaries of this type can be combined with have plus a past participle. When this occurs, the meaning suggests a past action with a wished for or preferred outcome. Consider these example sentences:

You could have told me that earlier. (You had the ability to tell me, but you did not.)

She had better have found the money. (a warning that this is the desired outcome)

I may have forgotten about it. (It is possible that I forgot.)

Your wallet might have been stolen. (It is possible the wallet is not lost but was stolen.)

They must have lost their way. (It is likely that they are lost.)

We should have phoned first. (It was wrong not to phone first.)

Ben would have helped you. (You were sure to have received Ben's help.)

Exercise 22

Rewrite the sentences provided with the modal auxiliaries in parentheses.

1. The team hurries to the stadium. (must)

2. Someone unlocks the door for you. (can)

3. Tim studies hard for his final exams. (had better)

4. I learn as much as I can about her. (would)

5. This is a good way to get to know one another. (may)

6. Charles comes along when we visit Graceland. (might)

7. Everyone uses good manners. (should)

8. Erik speaks with his angry neighbors. (could have)

9. Your son has the money for the payment. (had better have)

10. Perhaps she needs some help. (may have)

11. Someone sees the accident happen. (might have)

12. They go to the movies. (must have)

13. You get more sleep. (should have)

14. I plan a party for you. (would have)

15. My friends vote in the election. (better)

Exercise 23

Rewrite the sentences provided with the modal auxiliaries in parentheses. The modals provided here represent various types and tenses.

1. The students report to the auditorium. (be to)

2. My parents spend a lot of time in the country. (have to)

3. Mark asks a better question. (ought to have)

4. The boys fall asleep. (must have)

5. This is the right thing to do. (might)

6. They see a house in the distance. (could)

7. No one touches his stamp collection. (be allowed to)

8. This is a good lesson for you. (should)

9. I listen to my father. (should have)

10. Mr. Bennett speaks three languages. (can)

11. She forgets my name. (may have)

12. The girls leave the meeting early. (had to)

13. I sometimes nap after work. (have needed to)

14. They hold down their voices. (ought to)

15. Dad plays games with the children. (like to)

16. The Johnsons live across the street from us. (used to)

17. I see the anger in his eyes. (could)

18. He washes the dishes every day. (was supposed to)

19. Maria returns to Miami. (will have to)

20. We always travel to Korea. (have wanted to)

21. The hikers take the path on the right. (were to)

22. You have a good excuse. (had better)

23. She becomes a ballerina. (wished to)

24. The neighbors upstairs stop the noise. (have got to)

25. My brother takes the bus to work. (will have to)

Complete and Incomplete Actions

Complete Actions

English uses verbs in a way that shows the difference between an action that is complete and an action that is incomplete. So far, you have seen verbs in the form that shows an action that is complete. The same verbs can also suggest that the action is a habit. In the present tense, it is not always clear whether an action is complete, but the suggestion of a habit is obvious.

Present Tense

We tour the art museum. (This is not a habit. It is an action that is presumed complete in the present time.)

Jack sings in the choir. (His habit is to sing in the choir.)

I borrow money from Jake. (This may or may not be a habit. It may be an action that is presumed complete in the present time.)

My uncle collects stamps. (The uncle's habit is to collect stamps.)

Often adverbs tell that an action is done regularly or as a habit. The use of such adverbs makes clear with what regularity the action of the verb is performed.

I always arrive to work on time.

We sometimes picnic on the beach.

Bill rarely finishes a project.

Other adverbs that indicate that an action is done regularly or as a habit include the following:

all the time

constantly continually

every (day, week, etc.)

most of the time never occasionally often

five times a year	once a day
four times a month	persistently frequently	regularly
habitually	seldom
half of the time	twice a week hardly ever	usually

When the verb have is conjugated as a transitive verb, it shows an action that is complete or done regularly or as a habit, especially when accompanied by an appropriate adverb. For example:

I have a special gift for you. I always have a special gift for you.

Mark has the jitters before a concert. Most of the time, Mark has the jitters before a concert.

My aunt has tea with me. My aunt has tea with me every day.

Linking verbs can also suggest that an action is complete in the present time or is a habit or done regularly if accompanied by an appropriate adverb.

My sister seems quite happy. My sister always seems quite happy.

He becomes bored with this game. He often becomes bored with this game.

This mattress feels more comfortable. This mattress usually feels more comfortable.

I am shocked. I am never shocked.

Past Tense

It is easier to differentiate between a completed action and a regular or habitual action in the past tense, because that action has already been performed.

He returned to the library. (Complete. He arrived at the library.)

He sometimes returned to the library by noon. (His occasional habit was to return to the library by noon.)

I bought a new car. (Complete. I already own the new car.)

I rarely bought a car from that dealer. (It was not often that I bought a car from that dealer.)

June built a birdhouse. (Complete. The birdhouse is finished and ready for birds.)

June built a birdhouse every spring. (June's habit was to build a birdhouse every spring.)

Exercise 24

Rewrite each past tense sentence with any appropriate adverb.

1. Mr. Kelly fixed the old car.

2. I borrowed ten dollars from her.

3. We were interested in his poems.

4. My grandfather had a serious illness.

5. Each day became longer and longer.

6. It smelled awful in his room.

7. John went to school with his little sister.

8. The twins liked turkey sandwiches.

9. My uncle made a large salad for supper.

10. They traveled to Asia.

11. I spent my last dollar.

12. Andrea danced with the young man from France.

13. We began the lesson from Chapter 2.

14. The girls were late to soccer practice.

15. You spoke in German with her.

16. The sheets felt damp.

17. Everyone had a good time at my party.

18. My neighbor came by for a visit.

19. Barbara took the children for a walk.

20. Tim and I lived off the land.

The Perfect Tenses

Verbs in the present and past perfect tenses indicate a completed action, and with appropriate adverbs they show a regular or habitual action. These two tenses consist of the verb have or had, respectively, and are accompanied by a past participle.

I have seen that movie. (complete)

I have seen that movie several times. (habitual action)

We have spoken with Jack. (complete)

We have occasionally spoken with Jack. (habitual action)

My wife had baked a cake. (complete)

My wife had often baked a cake for my birthday. (habitual action)

He had borrowed money from me. (complete)

He had rarely borrowed money from me. (habitual action)

The verb to be and linking verbs show completed and habitual actions in the same way in these tenses.

She has been in Mexico. She has never been in Mexico.

I had been her best friend. I had always been her best friend.

He has seemed very angry. He has sometimes seemed very angry.
He had appeared arrogant. He had usually appeared arrogant.

Future Tense

The idea of a completed action or one of regularity or habit is also apparent in the future tense.

Jane will sing a song for us. Jane will often sing a song for us.
I will buy some groceries there. I will occasionally buy some groceries there.
We will have a party on the weekend. We will sometimes have a party on the weekend.

This also occurs with to be and linking verbs.

I will be bored with the project. I will never be bored with the project.
His ideas will prove wrong. His ideas will always prove wrong.

Exercise 25

Read each past tense sentence. Write the letter C in the blank provided if the action of the verb is complete. Or write the letter H in the blank provided if the action of the verb is regular or habitual. Then rewrite the sentences in the present perfect and future tenses. For example:

H She often studied at home.
She has often studied at home.
She will often study at home.

_____ 1. My cousin broke the vase.

_____ 2. We never played chess.

_____ 3. I usually wrote my letters in pencil.

_____ 4. There was a loud noise in the hall.

_____ 5. Someone knocked at the door.

_____ 6. Laura wanted a diamond ring.

_____ 7. Most of the time, she worked in a drugstore.

_____ 8. My son visited me once a year.

_____ 9. The men frequently stopped for a cool drink.

_____ 10. I continually asked for your help.

_____ 11. She rarely risked her money on a bet.

_____ 12. Donald fainted.

_____ 13. We watered the lawn every day.

____ 14. The boys hardly ever helped us.

____ 15. I was in Chicago for a week.

Incomplete Actions

An incomplete action can be shown by using a form of the verb to be followed by a present participle. Present participles are formed by adding the suffix -ing to an infinitive.

go → going

hurry → hurrying come → coming

When used in sentences, this kind of structure says that the action of the verb is still in progress or incomplete. For example:

I am going to the bus stop. (I'm on my way. I have not arrived there yet.)

She is speaking on the phone. (Her phone conversation is not yet complete.)

The men are working hard. (The work is in progress and not yet complete.)

This usage of to be and a present participle can occur in all the tenses.

Present

We are driving to California.

She is sleeping.

Past

Someone was looking in the window.

You were sitting at the computer.

Present and Past Perfect

Tom has been working here for two years.

I had been waiting for a long time.

Future and Future Perfect

The girls will be taking ballet lessons.

I will have been working for him for eight years by this time next week.

Exercise 26

In the blank provided, write the letter C if the action of the verb is complete or habitual. Write the letter I if the action of the verb is incomplete or in progress.

- _____ 1. She has been studying for the bar exam.
- _____ 2. No one saw the accident take place.
- _____ 3. We usually sit in the balcony.
- _____ 4. Dad has been working at the same job for years.
- _____ 5. I am baking an apple pie.
- _____ 6. Daniel suddenly rushed into the living room.
- _____ 7. The dog was sleeping under the table again.
- _____ 8. It is getting rather warm in here.
- _____ 9. Ben will tell another funny story.
- _____ 10. She will be traveling around Scandinavia.

Exercise 27

Rewrite the following phrases to show an incomplete action or one in progress. Retain the tense of the original phrase.

- 1. we study _____
- 2. she has learned _____
- 3. no one speaks _____
- 4. I had taken _____
- 5. you are _____
- 6. it becomes _____
- 7. they will argue _____
- 8. Mark is _____
- 9. he drank _____
- 10. I write _____

11. it started _____
12. you have followed _____
13. time goes _____
14. we shared _____
15. I will dress _____
16. she will have swum _____
17. the children were _____
18. we have gone _____
19. Tina was _____
20. he spent _____

An incomplete action can often be the result of an interruption. This can occur in the present tense but is more likely to happen in other tenses.

Incomplete Action

I was taking a bath

She had been washing the dishes

You will be sleeping

Interruption

when the phone rang.

when the lights went out.

when I get home tonight.

If the incomplete action of the sentence is in the past, the verb in the interruption must be a past tense verb. If the incomplete action of the sentence is in the future, the verb in the interruption must be a present tense verb.

Exercise 28

Fill in the blank with the appropriate form of the word in parentheses. For example:

She is dancing (dance) with Mark.

1. The women were _____ (play) cards when the pizza _____ (arrive).
2. Someone has _____ (be) eating cake.
3. We had been _____ (relax) in the yard when the rain _____ (start).
4. I _____ (be) trying on my clothes.
5. When Mr. Thomas _____ (arrive), I _____ (be) still taking a nap.
6. We are _____ (sit) in the den and _____ (read).
7. When the storm _____ (begin), we _____ (be) hiking in the woods.

8. I will _____ (be) working in the basement when you _____ (come) home.
9. You _____ (have) been fixing that car for hours.
10. The girls are _____ (pretend) that they are astronauts.
11. Jim was _____ (write) a letter when his sister _____ (burst) into his room.
12. I will _____ (be) preparing supper when the TV news program _____ (begin).
13. Marie _____ (be) taking two summer school courses.
14. Last year she _____ (be) taking one course but soon dropped it.
15. Bob has _____ (be) living at our house since last June.

Questions and Verbs

Yes-No Questions

Questions are statements that inquire into or ask about someone or something. When you ask a question that can be answered by either yes or no, there are two ways to form the question. In one of these ways, if the verb in the sentence is a form of to be, the verb precedes the subject in a present or past tense question.

Statement: He is at work today.

Question: Is he at work today?

Answer: Yes, he is at work today. No, he is not at work today

Statement: The boys were in Boston.

Question: Were the boys in Boston?

Answer: Yes, the boys were in Boston. No, the boys were in Philadelphia.

Because the incomplete or progressive form of a verb is composed of a form of to be plus a present participle, the same question structure is used in the present and past tenses. Present participles are composed of the infinitive of a verb and the suffix -ing (going, being, having, and so on). Because it is the verb to be that is conjugated in this structure, a form of the verb to be begins the question in the present and past tenses of the progressive form. The choice of the present participle does not affect the word order.

Are you having a good time?

Is your brother traveling in Spain?

Was I snoring too loudly?

Were the children playing in the street?

Exercise 29

Rewrite each statement as a yes-no question.

1. We were in Germany last summer.

2. She is giving a speech in San Diego.

3. I am certain that I am right.

4. Someone was tampering with the lock.

5. My nephew is serving in the Air Force.

6. Mr. Kelly was shoveling snow in the driveway.

7. These pants are too tight.

8. You were being very stubborn again.

9. I am thinking of staying another week in Denver.

10. It was difficult to understand.

11. It was storming the night he was born.

12. She is my wife and my best friend.

13. They were the first of our friends to become citizens.

14. It is finally getting warm again.

15. John was dancing with Bill's wife.

If the transitive verb to have is the verb in question, it is often possible to structure a question in which the verb precedes the subject.

Statement: She has a lot to do.

Question: Has she a lot to do?

Statement: You had enough money.

Question: Had you enough money?

Do, Does, and Did

When a verb other than to be or to have is in a present or past tense yes-no question, a different structure is required. The auxiliary to do is the first element of the question, followed by the subject and the verb. The tense and number of to do are determined by the tense and number of the verb in the statement.

Statement: He likes his new job.

Question: Does he like his new job?

Answer: Yes, he likes his new job. No, he does not like his new job.

Statement: The men play cards every night.

Question: Do the men play cards every night?

Answer: Yes, the men play cards every night. No, the men play cards once a week.

Statement: She studied at the library.

Question: Did she study at the library?

Answer: Yes, she studied at the library. No, she studied at home.

It is more common to use the auxiliary to do with the transitive verb to have rather than the verb-precedes-subject structure of a question.

Statement: She has a lot to do.

Question: Does she have a lot to do?

Statement: You had enough money.

Question: Did you have enough money?

Exercise 30

Rewrite the following statements as questions.

1. Daniel broke the expensive, new mirror.

2. I sold the little house on the lake.

3. Martin brings her flowers every week.

4. She loves his latest novel.

5. We were swimming in Lake Michigan.

6. Ms. Garcia bought a cottage in the mountains.

7. Somebody knows the correct answer.

8. Havana is the capital city of Cuba.

9. Jim really speaks four languages.

10. Ben had a problem with his car again.

11. You filled out the form incorrectly.

12. Her brother has her car today.

13. The little boys were playing with the new pups.

14. The doctor placed a cast on his broken ankle.

15. They stand on the corner and chat for a long time.

16. I am sick of these arguments.

17. She learned of Tom's illness today.

18. The river is warm enough for swimming.

19. Mark builds a cabinet for his girlfriend.

20. He landed the little plane in a field.

The Perfect and Future Tenses

In the perfect tenses, past participles are combined with a form of the auxiliary have, and in the future tense, infinitives are combined with the auxiliary will or shall. In such cases, the auxiliary is the first element of a question, followed by the subject and the past participle or infinitive. For example:

Statement: She has studied in Chicago.

Question: Has she studied in Chicago?

Answer: Yes, she has studied in Chicago. No, she has studied in New York.

Statement: We had bought the house.

Question: Had you bought the house?

Answer: Yes, we had bought the house. No, we had not bought the house.

Statement: Tom will travel to France.

Question: Will Tom travel to France.

Answer: Yes, Tom will travel to France. No, Tom will travel to Italy.

Exercise 31

Rewrite the following statements as questions.

1. Mr. Roberts had lived in Asia all his life.

2. The girls will help repair the chairs.

3. I have become quite ill again.

4. Tina will prepare some lunch for us.

5. You had already seen that movie.

6. Someone has taken my glasses from my desk.

7. They will arrive here by 10 P.M.

8. It will be late when Mark gets home.

9. Aunt Mary has gone to her country home.

10. Bill had always liked your cooking.

Will and Shall

In Chapter 2 you encountered the difference between will and shall. There is still one more difference to consider when using will or shall in questions when the subject is the first-person singular or plural.

The general rule is to use shall in questions that ask what one should do when the subject is the first-person singular or plural. However, if the subject (I or we) is wondering about what the future holds, then the appropriate future tense auxiliary is will. Compare the following groups of questions.

Questioning Whether This Is What One Should Do

Shall I buy a new car?

Shall I help you carry those boxes?

Shall we take a stroll down to the lake?

Shall Bill and I return the books for you?

Wondering What the Future Holds

Will I ever buy a new car?

Will I win the lottery someday?

Will we see one another again in the future?

Will Mary and I get married soon?

Exercise 32

Circle the appropriate auxiliary (will or shall) for each question. Then in the blank provided, write the number 1 if the question is asking whether one should do something. Write the number 2 if the subject in the question is wondering what the future holds.

1 = what one should do

2 = what the future holds

- ___ 1. Will / Shall we take a drive out into the country?
- ___ 2. Will / Shall I warm up some soup for you?
- ___ 3. Will / Shall I be rich and famous someday?
- ___ 4. Will / Shall you and I borrow Dad's car to go downtown?
- ___ 5. Will / Shall we get there on time?
- ___ 6. Will / Shall we drop in on Henry for a visit?
- ___ 7. Will / Shall I ever get accepted into Harvard University?
- ___ 8. Will / Shall we find the money somewhere in his house?
- ___ 9. Will / Shall Marie and I clean up the kitchen for you?
- ___ 10. Will / Shall I become a surgeon someday?

Modal Auxiliaries

Just like other auxiliaries (be, have, do, will, and shall), most modal auxiliaries are the first element in a yes-no question. Here are a few examples:

Can you explain this to me?
Should we get off the bus at the next corner?
Must the boys be so loud?
Were we supposed to donate some money?
Ought she to have said that?

However, certain auxiliaries used in present and past tense questions require the use of to do as their auxiliary verb. For example:

Do you have to play the piano right now?
Do they like to dance?
Does your father need to rest for a while?

Did they used to have a house in this neighborhood?
Did Tina want to go out for dinner?
Did anyone wish to read these old magazines?

But when the same auxiliaries are used in the perfect and future tenses, just like other verbs, to do is not used.

Have you had to study long?
Had he wanted to take a nap?
Will the tourists like to go shopping?

Exercise 33

Rewrite each phrase as a question with the modal auxiliary provided. Retain the tense of the original phrase. For example:

they learn Do they want to learn? (want to)

1. we lived _____ (have to)
2. he will sing _____ (be allowed to)
3. she writes _____ (like to)
4. you arrived _____ (be to)
5. someone bought _____ (be supposed to)
6. I think _____ (must)
7. we argued _____ (used to)

8. you speak _____ (ought to)
9. they will test _____ (wish to)
10. he had stayed _____ (need to)

Interrogatives

A second type of question is composed of an introductory interrogative word followed by the subject and verb. Interrogative words ask about a specific element in a sentence. For example:

Interrogative Word	Asks About
who	animate subject
whom	animate object
whose	possession by an animate subject or object
what	animate subject or object
where	location or motion to a place
when	time
which	distinction between things
how	manner or mode
why	reason or cause

The interrogative how can be combined with other words to form new interrogatives. Following are but a few examples:

how often	how long
how many	how soon

Verbs are generally not affected when a statement is changed to a question with an interrogative word. They follow the rules described previously for the various auxiliaries. However, the interrogatives that replace the subject of a sentence (who and what) break that rule. For example, even though the original subject of a sentence is a plural, the interrogative subject is always singular. That means that the form of the verb changes.

Who* and What as Interrogative Words

Bill is a friend of hers.	Who is a friend of hers?
The girls were playing soccer.	Who was playing soccer? (were becomes was)
Their house looks beautiful.	What looks beautiful?
The flowers smell nice.	What smells nice? (smell becomes smells)

Other Interrogative Words

His apartment is in London.

Bill arrived at seven sharp.

He had driven too fast.

Mary finally met Susan.

Where is his apartment?

When did Bill arrive?

How had he driven?

Whom did Mary finally meet?

Exercise 34

Rewrite the following sentences as questions. Change the underlined element to the appropriate interrogative word.

1. Ms. Kelly has taken a trip to China.

2. The blue tie looks better on you.

3. The German tourists are traveling as far as Tucson.

4. She cried so hard because Paul cannot come home for the holidays.

5. We work out four times a week.

6. The farm made a profit for them every year.

7. He found twenty gold coins in an old chest.

8. Robert's wife is a Hollywood actress.

9. You can bring those boxes to me today.

10. Several paintings were stolen from the museum.

Imperatives

Both transitive and intransitive verbs can form commands—that is, they become imperatives. The base form of a verb, the infinitive, becomes an imperative when the particle word to is omitted. To be polite, the word please is often included in the command. Here are some examples:

Infinitive

to be to come to have to spend to stop

Imperative

Be on your best behavior.
Please come home soon.
Have a good time at the party.
Spend less money.
Stop fighting, please.

The subject of an imperative verb such as those just illustrated is the second-person you. However, that pronoun is elliptical; it is not said or written but understood. No matter what the subject of a sentence might be, when the sentence is changed to an imperative, no subject is stated. And no matter what tense the verb of a sentence has, when it is stated as an imperative, the verb is given as the base form.

John found the money.

We will drive to Montana.

Find the money.

Drive to Montana.

In the case of auxiliaries, this form of imperative cannot be used. Instead, the auxiliary follows the pronoun you in an ordinary sentence that suggests what someone should do.

You ought to help your father.

You should go to work on time.

You are supposed to fill out these forms.

Exercise 35

Rewrite the following sentences as imperatives. Note that the sentences are given in a variety of tenses. For example:

We are trying to organize these files.

Try to organize these files.

1. My sister came home early.

2. The men will stay home from work.

3. I listened to these new CDs.

4. Marie has sung in a choir.

5. He borrowed a lawn mower from the neighbors.

6. You water the vegetable garden and the flowers.

7. No one believed me.

8. We are quiet.

9. I went to the movies with friends.

10. We had had a hamburger with fries.

11. Mom turns on the lights.

12. Mr. Snyder will return the books tomorrow.

13. Mark stood up.

14. They were sleeping in that large tent.

15. You ran to the store.

16. His sister kissed the children good-night.

17. Your parents were smart about this.

18. She hurried to the hospital.

19. We looked into the mirror and were surprised.

20. He will sit down and take his shoes off.

Let's

Another form of English imperative infers that the person giving the command is participating in the action of the command. Imperatives of this type begin with the contraction let's (let us) and are followed by an infinitive phrase.

Let's listen to some music.

Let's ask to borrow Dad's car.

Let's go to the movies tomorrow.

Let's try not to argue so much.

Exercise 36

Rewrite the following sentences as imperatives with let's. Note that the sentences are given in a variety of tenses. For example:

We buy some ice cream.

Let's buy some ice cream.

1. They will take a drive out to Lake Tahoe.

2. Our uncle has tried to be fair about this.

3. We test the soil for insects.

4. We don't bother the newborn kittens.

5. I wrote Karen a couple postcards.

6. We are on time more often.

7. You had spent a lot more time talking.

8. She forgot about the problems with the car.

9. Tom arranged for a taxi.

10. Mr. Snyder gets home before sunset.

11. Earn some extra money.

12. Marie and I went out dancing.

13. Donate some money to their cause.

14. I will join an athletic club.

15. His brothers were more helpful.

16. Who practiced kicking goals?

17. Are we planning our winter vacation?

18. Take the bus to town.

19. Jim has bathed that smelly dog.

20. Were you renting an apartment in the city?

Let

If the verb let is used without the contraction of us (let's), it still is an imperative, but it has a different meaning. It suggests that someone or something is allowed to perform an action. The verb let is followed by a direct object and an infinitive phrase.

Let me help you with that.

Let us know whether you can come for a visit.

Please let the problem just go away.

Let the players get a little rest, please.

Negation

When negating most imperatives, do not or its contraction don't become part of the command.

Command to You

Do not open the door.

Do not be late.

Do not have any cake.

Don't open the door.

Don't be late.

Don't have any cake.

Command with Let

Do not let him sit there.

Do not let the game start without me.

Don't let him sit there.

Don't let the game start without me.

The exception to this rule is let's. The negative adverb not is placed after the contraction let's.

Let's not worry about that.
Let's not leave the house today.
Let's not be so angry.

Exercise 37

Rewrite the following sentences as imperatives with let. Note that the sentences are given in a variety of tenses. For example:

John sells his old car.
Let John sell his old car.

1. The soldiers stopped under a shady tree.

2. My father has not given them more money.

3. I recommend a good restaurant to you.

4. She asked for a raise.

5. The lawyers have agreed on the selling price.

6. When did Mark explain it to you?

7. Doesn't some other person work on this job?

8. They made a list of their complaints.

9. He pretends he doesn't know us.

10. It happens naturally.

11. The balloons have floated into the sky.

12. He is captain of the team.

13. Does her husband do it for her?

14. I have to change my clothes.

15. That was a warning to you.

16. The dogs slept in the garage.

17. They had worn some funny costumes.

18. Anna will help with the puzzle.

19. I had answered.

20. Will your friend lend you the money?

General Commands

Imperatives also occur in general commands. These commands are usually given as announcements (over a loudspeaker, for example) or are written as signs (such as on a wall). Some examples:

Keep moving. (what a police officer tells a crowd)

Keep to the right. (a sign along a highway)

No smoking. (a sign on a wall)

No talking. (a sign in a library)

Pick up your order here. (a sign at a restaurant drive-up window)

Place your order here. (a sign at a restaurant drive-up window)

Please line up alphabetically. (a sign in a school; an announcement)

Reduce speed ahead. (a sign along a highway)

Remain behind the yellow line. (a sign at a passport checkpoint)

Wait your turn. (a sign in a business office or store)

Exercise 38

In the blank provided, write the number 1 if the sentence is a standard imperative with the pronoun you receiving the command. Write the number 2 if the imperative includes the speaker in the action. Write the number 3 if the imperative suggests that someone or something is allowed to perform the action. Write the number 4 if the imperative is a general command.

- _____ 1. Stay in your line until called.
- _____ 2. Please send me your latest catalog.
- _____ 3. Let's have a surprise party for Martin.
- _____ 4. Have a wonderful time on your vacation.
- _____ 5. Get out!
- _____ 6. Fasten your seatbelts.
- _____ 7. Let the students correct their own work.
- _____ 8. Hold on tight.
- _____ 9. No loitering.
- _____ 10. Give me a dozen donuts, please.
- _____ 11. Let it rain.
- _____ 12. Let's not get something to eat.
- _____ 13. Take good care of your little sister.
- _____ 14. Try to hold your breath for two minutes.
- _____ 15. Fly the Friendly Skies.
- _____ 16. Let's bet on it.
- _____ 17. Share the candy with your brothers.
- _____ 18. Let me try to repair that chair.
- _____ 19. Don't follow me, please.
- _____ 20. Pull your car over to the curb, sir.

Negation and Contractions

To Be

When a form of the verb to be is negated in the present or past tense, the adverb not follows the verb. This is true even when the verb to be is part of a longer phrase or an auxiliary.

This is not my coat.
We are not allowed to play in that room.
I am not feeling well today.
My sister was not at school today.
They were not very good friends.

When an auxiliary is used with a form of the verb to be, the adverb not stands between the auxiliary and the verb. This is true with auxiliaries that change the tense (have, had, will, and shall) and modal auxiliaries.

This has not been a very good day.
Mary had not been here before.
I shall not be able to attend your party.
This will not be my first time in America.
You cannot be wrong again.
We ought not to be so sure that we are right.
I had better not be late for class.

If a sentence that contains a form of the verb to be or an auxiliary is in question form, the adverb not will follow the subject of the sentence.

Are you not Marie's brother?
Was Tim not at the movies last night?
Have they not repaired the car yet?
Should you not get a little rest?

This same structure occurs when a question begins with an interrogative word.

Why are they not at home yet?
What could he not understand?

Do, Does, Did

When the transitive verb to have is negated in the present and past tenses, the adverb not sometimes follows the verb. However, this form is not the most commonly used.

I have not any money. I had not a car.

The more common way of negating the verb to have as well as most other verbs is by placing a form of the verb to do plus not before the verb. The tense and number of the positive sentence determines the tense and number of the verb to do.

Positive	Negative
I have a book.	I do not have a book.
He has money.	He does not have money.
We had a lot of time.	We did not have a lot of time.

The same format is used with other verbs.

Positive	Negative
She spells well.	She does not spell well.
I caught the ball.	I did not catch the ball.
They like this novel.	They do not like this novel.
They brought a bottle of wine.	They did not bring a bottle of wine.

Because the other tenses require the use of an auxiliary and auxiliaries follow the rules previously described, a form of to do is not used in the perfect or future tenses.

Present: We do not live there.
Past: We did not live there.
Present Perfect: We have not lived there.
Past Perfect: We had not lived there.
Future: We will not live there.

In the present and past tenses, a question that is negated begins with a form of the verb to do and the adverb not follows the subject of the sentence. In the perfect and future tenses, the question begins with the auxiliary and the adverb not follows the subject.

- Do you not understand what I mean?
- Does the doctor not know about your illness?
- Did I not tell you to be home on time?
- Have they not been here before?
- Had she not signed the document?
- Will the men not work today?

If an interrogative word begins a question, a form of to do follows the interrogative word and not follows the subject in the present and past tenses. In the other tenses, an auxiliary follows the interrogative word.

- What did she not hear?
- Whom have they not visited?

Exercise 39

Rewrite the following sentences by placing not in the appropriate position. Add a form of to do where necessary.

1. Mike spoke with the landlord.

2. I held open the door.

3. We will arrive on time.

4. Lightning strikes the tree.

5. Will your father help us?

6. Jim will travel by train.

7. I like hiking in the rain.

8. Mary has broken her arm.

9. Had they lived here long?

10. You should buy a house in town.

11. Our vacation went by too fast.

12. He has kept the money for himself.

13. You write very well.

14. The children have been learning French.

15. Your voice sounds angry.

16. I saw them at the store.

17. What did you sell?

18. Shall I serve dinner?

19. They come from Cuba.

20. Jean sent her a postcard.

Other Negatives

There are several other words that can negate a sentence. For example:

I have no money. (an adjective)
We never visited them. (an adverb)
No one saw us hiding. (a pronoun)
Nobody bought any tickets. (a pronoun)
Nothing is that important. (a noun)
The bus went nowhere interesting. (an adverb)

Some of these negative words have a counterpart that is composed of the adverb not and a word with the prefix any-. One form is simple negation; the other form is complex negation.

Simple Negation

no no one nobody nothing nowhere

Complex Negation

not any not anyone not anybody not anything not anywhere

Both forms can negate a sentence but in different ways. The form that uses not any- requires a form of the verb to do in the present and past tenses except if the verb in the sentence is a form of to be or an auxiliary.

Simple Negation

He bought no shoes.
I dance with no one.
She saw nobody.
I have nothing for you.
We found them nowhere.

Complex Negation

He did not buy any shoes.
I do not dance with anyone.
She did not see anybody.
I do not have anything for you.
We did not find them anywhere.

These examples illustrate these forms of negation in other tenses and with other auxiliaries:

Simple Negation

He is nowhere to be found.
We have found no one.
They will ask for nothing.
You must have no conscience.

Complex Negation

He is not anywhere to be found.
We have not found anyone.
They will not ask for anything.
You must not have any conscience.

Exercise 40

Rewrite the following phrases with the not any- form of negation.

1. She sees no one. _____
2. Has he found nothing? _____
3. They are going nowhere. _____
4. Tom hurts nobody. _____
5. We lost no time. _____
6. I believe no one. _____
7. This is nothing. _____
8. They got nowhere. _____
9. I had questioned nobody. _____
10. They will receive no gifts. _____

Let's and Let

The imperative forms let's and let use two different types of negation. The adverb not follows let's. The verb do plus not precede let.

Let's not argue about that.
Let's not go out for dinner tonight.
Let's not get up too early tomorrow.

Do not let Jim work on the car.
Do not let me forget to take my purse.
Do not let the children play in the living room.

Contractions

It is common to write verbs and not together as one word—as contractions. Compare the following pairs of phrases.

Verb plus not	Contraction is not	isn't was not	wasn't have not	haven't cannot	can't shall not	shan't
should not	shouldn't

Exercise 41

Rewrite the following verb phrases as contractions.

1. would not _____
2. must not _____
3. is not allowed _____
4. could not _____
5. will not _____
6. had not _____
7. need not _____
8. were not _____
9. have not been _____
10. will not be _____
11. does not _____
12. did not _____
13. was not able to _____
14. were not supposed to _____
15. are not _____

When contractions are formed with words other than not, the contraction is negated by following it with the adverb not.

I am not	I'm not
you will not	you'll not
you are not	you're not

Exercise 42

Rewrite the following verb phrases as contractions that are followed by the adverb not.

1. they have not _____
2. we are not _____
3. it is not _____
4. I would not _____
5. she will not _____
6. you have not _____
7. Sarah is not _____
8. you would not _____
9. he is not _____
10. they will not _____

In a statement, not is in the same position as is a contraction with not.

He is not at home.

He isn't at home.

They will not help.

They won't help.

She has not arrived yet.

She hasn't arrived yet.

But in a question, not follows the subject, whereas a contraction with not is attached to the auxiliary.

Is he not at home?

Isn't he at home?

Will they not help?

Won't they help?

Has she not arrived yet?

Hasn't she arrived yet?

Exercise 43

Rewrite the following sentences by placing not in the appropriate position and by adding a form of to do where necessary. Use a contraction wherever possible.

1. Laura danced with the landlord.

2. I held her hand.

3. We will depart on time.

4. The boys are asleep.

5. Can your father help us?

6. I will travel by bus.

7. Do you like playing the guitar?

8. The boy has broken his arm.

9. Had he worked here long?

10. You would buy a car from him.

11. Can they go to the store?

12. She has kept the puppy warm.

13. You sing very well.

14. They have been learning about Mexico.

15. That song sounds sad.

16. He saw them yesterday.

17. We bought it from Mr. Garcia.

18. She did it wrong.

19. Dad must try to bake a cake.

20. I should speak with her.

Modifying Verbs

Verbs are modified by adverbs. Adverbs can be individual words, phrases, or clauses. And there is more than one type of adverb. They are adverbs of frequency, manner, time, place, and degree.

Most adverbs are formed by adding the suffix -ly to an adjective while conforming to the English rules of spelling (for example, -y changes to -i = happily).

Adjective	Adverb
careful	carefully
quick	quickly
simple	simply

A few adverbs are identical to their adjectival counterparts. For example:

Adjective	Adverb
early	early fast	fast
late	late
monthly	monthly
daily	daily
weekly	weekly
yearly	yearly

Adverbs of Frequency

When a transitive verb is modified by an adverb of frequency, the adverb tends to stand in front of the verb unless the adverb is in the form of a phrase. Then it comes at the end of the sentence. Adverbs of frequency answer the question how often.

She usually buys her clothes at this store.
 I sometimes like waffles with whipped cream.
 The women rarely have enough time.
 They come home once a week.

If the verb phrase includes an auxiliary, the adverb of frequency follows the auxiliary.

I have sometimes liked waffles with whipped cream.

The women will rarely have enough time.

Adverbs of Manner

Adverbs of manner tend to follow an intransitive verb or verb of motion. Adverbs of manner answer the question how.

Martin will drive slowly.

She runs excitedly into the room.

I am walking briskly.

Adverbs of manner can be individual words or phrases. Let's look at some of these.

Individual Words

badly

politely calmly

Phrases

with great sadness

in anger

with a happy smile

An adverb of manner has more than one position in a sentence when it modifies a transitive verb. It can sometimes introduce the sentence, it can stand before the verb, or it can stand at the end of the sentence. For example:

Gently he kissed her cheek.

He gently kissed her cheek.

He kissed her cheek gently.

If the adverb is in the form of a phrase, it is not placed before the verb.

With a big smile on my lips, I opened my gifts.

I opened my gifts with a big smile on my lips.

Exercise 44

Rewrite the following sentences in the tenses shown in parentheses. Change the adverb of frequency in bold to another adverb of frequency of your choice.

1. (Present) I never spend my money wisely.

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

2. (Present) She seldom sits with me.

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

3. (Present) Bob rarely writes me.

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

Follow the same directions. But change the adverb of manner in bold to another adverb of manner of your choice.

4. (Present) He rushes home out of breath.

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

5. (Present) She speaks the words softly.

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

6. (Present) They turn the corner fast.

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

Adverbs of Time

Adverbs of time—such as now, still, yesterday, finally, or Monday—answer the question when. They can be individual words, phrases, or clauses. For example:

Individual Words

recently today tomorrow

Phrases

on Friday
during the week
in the winter

Clauses

after the dance ended since she left home before he got on the train

Adverbs of time can introduce a sentence or follow it.

Yesterday, he bought a new laptop.
He bought a new laptop yesterday.

During the day, Bob began to feel ill.
Bob began to feel ill during the day.

Exercise 45

Circle the adverb that should appear in the blank to appropriately modify the verb in the phrase.

1. she _____ worries (late / previously / rarely / in the morning)
2. I have _____ sung (never / last year / twice a week / someday)
3. they arrived _____ (seldom / usually / early / December)
4. _____ he began his story (with a little grin / fast / tomorrow / never)
5. _____ I'll help (fast / angrily / today / kindly)
6. he went there _____ (on his bike / formerly / closely / when you leave)
7. we _____ enjoyed ourselves (always / daily / in the evening / yesterday)
8. you said that _____ (next week / only once / never / in a month)
9. _____ we stayed here (in a day / during summer / quickly / calmly)
10. they will _____ participate (last year / gladly / in the fall / last Monday)
11. he had run _____ (never / formerly / fast / when I phone)
12. we _____ have a party (rudely / slowly / often / in the spring)

13. I have _____ seen that (quickly / last week / yesterday / seldom)
14. it broke _____ (yesterday / after she arrives / soon / before I sing)
15. it happened _____ (with a loud bang / next Friday / calmly / until 5 A.M.)

Adverbs of Place

Adverbs of place answer the question where. Some of these adverbs are single words.

anywhere	somewhere
here	there
inside	underground
overseas	upstairs

Other adverbs of place appear in phrase form, primarily as prepositional phrases.

near the window	at home
in the kitchen	on the table
alongside the highway	over there

Adverbs of place tend to follow the verb. Let's look at some example sentences.

They lived overseas for two years.
I help mom in the kitchen.
We were painting downstairs.
They now live in Buffalo.

Exercise 46

In the blank provided, write the letter T if the adverb in bold is an adverb of time. Write the letter P if the adverb is an adverb of place.

- ____ 1. Al was reading in the garden.
____ 2. I met Susan at a party.
____ 3. She lost her gloves while she was running.
____ 4. The train left the station late.

- ___ 5. My room is upstairs.
___ 6. There is something under the rug.
___ 7. This program is broadcast locally.
___ 8. The dog is always kept outside.
___ 9. Do you have a house around here?
___ 10. My wallet fell behind the dresser.
___ 11. I tried to contact you on Tuesday.
___ 12. Let's stay out on the patio.
___ 13. You had better phone me in the morning.
___ 14. I want to meet your sister soon.
___ 15. She spent the summer abroad.

Adverbs of Degree

Adverbs of degree answer the question to what extent something is done. Some of these adverbs are:

adequately	practically almost	profoundly
entirely	quite
extremely	rather greatly	really
highly	too
perfectly	very

These adverbs help to define other adverbs that modify verbs.

She spoke extremely rapidly.

She spoke very rapidly.

She spoke too rapidly.

He answered her almost rudely.

He answered her extremely rudely.

He answered her practically rudely.

Exercise 47

Circle the adverb that should appear in the blank to appropriately modify the adverb in the sentence.

1. She shouts _____ loudly. (gladly / extremely / calmly / profoundly)
2. I worked _____ carefully. (finally / weekly / rather / early)
3. The door opened _____ slowly. (soon / afterward / rudely / really)
4. They have visited _____ often. (highly / too / immediately / in winter)
5. Dinner was served _____ on time. (almost / perfectly / afternoon / early)
6. He danced _____ well. (at home / rather / recently / regularly)
7. She paints _____ beautifully. (daily / rarely / greatly / quite)
8. You speak _____ honestly. (too / there / anywhere / with a grin)
9. I understood you _____ clearly. (perfectly / greatly / highly / late)
10. He patted the puppy _____ gently. (usually / home / at home / extremely)

Using Participles

English participles come in two forms: present participles and past participles. Each form has its own unique function when part of a verb phrase. But both can be used in the same way when functioning as modifiers.

Present Participles

A present participle is formed by adding the suffix -ing to the infinitive of a verb while conforming to the English rules of spelling (for example, -e is omitted = make → making). Some examples:

talking being hurrying finding discussing shaking

A present participle is used with a form of to be to form the progressive or incomplete tense of a verb.

I am singing.
She was learning.
They have been appearing.
What had been happening?
You will be driving.

Exercise 48

Rewrite the following phrases in the tenses shown in parentheses.

1. (Present) Who is speaking?

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

2. (Present) I am going home.

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

3. (Present) Are you helping?

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

4. (Present) Marie is crying.

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

5. (Present) The children are playing.

(Past) _____

(Present perfect) _____

(Future) _____

Although present participles are formed from verbs, they can be used to modify nouns. If the present participle is used alone, it can precede the noun it modifies. If the present participle is part of a longer phrase, it follows the word it modifies.

the sitting girl

a sleeping puppy

the laughing man

the girl sitting here

a puppy sleeping under the table

the man laughing at her joke

Adverbs can modify verbs. Therefore, if an adverb modifies the present participle, the phrase can precede the noun or follow it.

a calmly sleeping puppy

the loudly laughing man

a puppy calmly sleeping

the man loudly laughing

This function of present participles is used in place of relative clauses. For example:

The girl who is sitting.

The boys who are playing ball.

The sitting girl.

The boys playing ball.

A present participle is also used when the verb in the relative clause is in the habitual or complete form.

The girl who sits.

The sitting girl.

The boys who play ball.

The boys playing ball.

Exercise 49

Change the phrase that contains a relative clause to one that uses the present participle as a modifier. If the present participle can be located in two positions, write the phrase in two forms.

1. a woman who is napping _____
2. the cat that chases a mouse _____
3. the top that is spinning _____
4. a team that is winning again _____
5. a story that develops _____
6. the boys who read _____
7. a student who is studying hard _____
8. a river that runs through the valley _____
9. snow that is gently falling _____
10. music that fills my ears _____
11. something that puzzles me _____
12. the waves that are loudly crashing _____
13. the waves that crash on the beach _____
14. rain that is filling the streets _____
15. flowers that slowly bloom _____
16. someone who yells a lot _____
17. a book that costs more than twenty dollars _____
18. the class that is rather boring _____
19. people who exaggerate everything _____
20. storms that are destroying homes _____

Past Participles

Regular past participles are formed by adding the suffix -ed to the verb, while conforming to the English rules of spelling (for example, -y changes to -i- = hurry → hurried). Regular participles are identical to the simple past tense. Irregular participles are formed in a variety of ways, often with a vowel change in the stem of the verb and an -en ending. Let's look at some commonly used irregular past participles.

Infinitive	Past Participle
to go	gone
to have	had to speak	spoken
to cut	cut

Look at the appendix for a list of irregular past participles.

A past participle is used to form the present perfect, past perfect, and future perfect tenses.

	Regular Verb	Irregular Verb
Present Perfect	he has looked	he has stolen
Past Perfect	he had looked	he had stolen
Future Perfect	he will have looked	he will have stolen

Exercise 50

Rewrite the following infinitives as past participles.

1. to spell _____
2. to write _____
3. to sell _____
4. to happen _____
5. to see _____
6. to say _____
7. to fit _____
8. to watch _____
9. to please _____
10. to find _____

11. to help _____
12. to control _____
13. to develop _____
14. to send _____
15. to make _____
16. to show _____
17. to bring _____
18. to know _____
19. to think _____
20. to be _____

Exercise 51

Rewrite the following phrases in the tenses shown in parentheses.

1. (Present perfect) Who has spoken?
(Past perfect) _____
(Future perfect) _____
2. (Present perfect) I have taught.
(Past perfect) _____
(Future perfect) _____
3. (Present perfect) She has been.
(Past perfect) _____
(Future perfect) _____
4. (Present perfect) You have broken.
(Past perfect) _____
(Future perfect) _____
5. (Present perfect) We have slept.
(Past perfect) _____
(Future perfect) _____

Although past participles are formed from verbs, they can be used to modify nouns. If the past participle is used alone, it can precede the noun it modifies. If the past participle is part of a longer phrase, it follows the word it modifies.

the broken chair
a rented cottage recorded voices

the chair broken during our move a cottage rented for the summer voices recorded by the police

Adverbs can modify verbs. Therefore, if an adverb modifies the past participle, the phrase can precede the noun or follow it. If the phrase follows the noun, the adverb has two positions in the phrase.

the recently broken chair poorly recorded voices

the chair recently broken / broken recently voices poorly recorded / recorded poorly

This function of past participles is used in place of passive voice relative clauses. For example:

the man who was injured

the injured man

the book that was read by him

the book read by him

The same thing occurs when the passive verb in the relative clause is the progressive or incomplete form.

the house that was being razed

the razed house

the poem that was being written in French

the poem written in French

However, it is possible to use the progressive form of the verb as a modifier by placing being in front of the past participle. But this form can only follow the noun.

The poem being written in French.

(The passive voice will be taken up in detail in Chapter 18.)

Exercise 52

Change the phrase that contains a relative clause to one that uses the past participle as a modifier. If the past participle can be located in more than one position, write the phrase in its various forms.

1. the apple that was eaten by Jack _____
2. the word that was written _____
3. people who were arrested _____
4. a girl who was kissed by him _____

5. a church that was being built in the city _____
6. music that was heard throughout the house _____
7. a room that was painted red _____
8. the car that was being repaired _____
9. the barn that was set on fire _____
10. the movie star that was much photographed _____
11. the bedroom that was richly decorated _____
12. the child that was gently placed on the bed _____
13. the operation that was being successfully completed _____
14. a car that was buried by the snow _____
15. leaves that were carelessly burned _____
16. shoes that were just polished _____
17. candy that was being eaten _____
18. a village that was reached only by air _____
19. the vehicles that were stopped _____
20. film that was developed slowly _____

Verbals: Infinitives and Gerunds

Infinitives and gerunds are called verbals; they are derived from verbs but do not function as verbs.

Infinitives

Infinitives are the base form of a verb that is preceded by the particle word to: to run, to sing, to play, and so on. An infinitive may function as a subject, a direct object, a subject complement, an adjective, or an adverb in a sentence.

When an infinitive is used as the subject of a sentence, it is functioning as a noun.

Infinitive as Subject

To wait makes me angry.

To run is great exercise.

Noun as Subject

Your laziness makes me angry.

A brisk walk is great exercise.

An infinitive can be used as any of the following:

- The direct object of a sentence

I always liked to study.

Everyone wanted to participate.

- The subject complement of a sentence

Her greatest joy is to dance.

Robert's wish was to fly.

- An adjective

No one had the courage to disagree.

They receive a message to surrender.

- An adverb

We must practice to win.

You cannot just think to understand.

Exercise 53

In the blank provided, write the letter S if the infinitive in bold is used as the subject of the sentence. Write the letter D if it is used as the direct object. Write the letter C if it is used as the subject complement. Write the letters AJ if it is used as an adjective. Write the letters AV if it is used as an adverb.

- _____ 1. John never liked to sing.
- _____ 2. Why do you want to leave?
- _____ 3. You have to study to learn.
- _____ 4. The best exercise to me is to jog.
- _____ 5. To play video games can be a waste of time.
- _____ 6. To fall in love can be dangerous.
- _____ 7. She always hated to gossip.
- _____ 8. They get the command to attack.
- _____ 9. That is a cruel thing to do.
- _____ 10. To lie was his own choice.

Infinitives are used very commonly in infinitive phrases. That is, they are combined with other elements such as adverbs, objects, or prepositional phrases. Infinitive phrases are used in the same way as individual infinitives. For example:

To smoke anywhere in this building is prohibited. (subject)

Bill agreed to give me a ride to work. (direct object)

There are several transitive verbs that can be followed by infinitive phrases. Some of the most commonly used are:

agree	begin	continue	decide fail	hesitate	hope	intend
learn	neglect	offer	plan
prefer	pretend	promise	refuse
remember	start	try

Here are some example sentences:

They begin to understand his problem.
I hope to visit Europe someday.
The men planned to work on the old car.

Often a noun or pronoun precedes an infinitive phrase and functions somewhat like the subject of the infinitive phrase. That phrase can then be used as a direct object in a sentence.

My boss asked me to organize an office party.
I wanted the children to spend more time reading.

There are several transitive verbs that are followed by a subject and infinitive phrase. Some of the most commonly used are:

advise	allow	convince	remind encourage	force	hire	teach invite	permit	tell	appoint order

Here are some example sentences:

We never allowed him to use our car.
Ms. Garcia teaches the children to read.
No one told me to wash the dishes.

Exercise 54

Complete each sentence with an infinitive phrase formed from the words in parentheses. For example:

She asks . . .
(John / speak English)
She asks John to speak English.

1. I wanted . . .
 - a. (they / hurry home) _____
 - b. (you / help wash the car) _____
 - c. (someone / find a solution) _____

d. (she / dance with me) _____

e. (Bill / fix the bicycle) _____

2. Jim asks . . .

a. (I / lend him ten dollars) _____

b. (we / drive him home) _____

c. (he / come for dinner) _____

d. (the girls / meet him in an hour) _____

e. (no one / join him) _____

3. Mom reminded . . .

a. (she / return by noon) _____

b. (they / eat a good lunch) _____

c. (Tom / set his alarm clock) _____

d. (you / buy some milk) _____

e. (Mark and Sue / stay in their rooms) _____

4. Mr. Brown will hire . . .

a. (we / sort the mail) _____

b. (she / type some letters) _____

c. (I / work in the warehouse) _____

d. (the men / repair the furnace) _____

e. (he / clean the office) _____

The transitive verbs to ask, to expect, to want, and would like can be used with an infinitive phrase that has a subject or that has none. For example:

Bill asks me to go to the library with him.

Bill asks to see my stamp collection.

I expected Mary to be on time.

I expected to find you at home today.

I don't want it to happen again.

I don't want to lose any more money.

Would you like us to stop by for a visit?

Would you like to go shopping?

Exercise 55

Complete each sentence with two infinitive phrases formed from the words in parentheses. Write one with the subject provided; write one without the subject. For example:

She asks . . .

(John / speak English / dance with me)

She asks John to speak English.

She asks to dance with me.

1. Do you expect . . . ?

a. (they / come here every day) _____

b. (receive a good salary) _____

2. Someone asked . . .

a. (I / pay you a visit) _____

b. (use my laptop) _____

3. We would like . . .

a. (she / apply for the job) _____

b. (introduce them to our son) _____

4. I don't want . . .

a. (anyone / use my credit card) _____

b. (stay here very long) _____

Gerunds

Gerunds are verbals that look like present participles. Present participles are used to form progressive tenses or as modifiers. Gerunds, however, are used as nouns that describe an action or a state of being. Compare how a gerund can be used in the same way as any other noun.

Gerund as Noun

Running keeps me fit.

I like swimming.

Standard Noun

Exercise keeps me fit.

I like music.

Gerunds can be used like other nouns: as a subject, a direct object, a subject complement, or an object of a preposition.

Baking takes a lot of talent. (subject)
Do you really like ironing? (direct object)
What I'm best at is wrestling. (subject complement)
The boy was punished for lying. (object of preposition)

Exercise 56

In the blank provided, write the letter S if the gerund in bold is used as the subject of the sentence. Write the letter D if it is used as the direct object. Write the letter C if it is used as the subject complement. Write the letter P if it is used as the object of a preposition.

- _____ 1. I never cared for singing.
- _____ 2. Joking is out of place here.
- _____ 3. My pet peeve was gossiping.
- _____ 4. None of us is interested in programming.
- _____ 5. The activities run from jogging to oil painting.
- _____ 6. Is talking allowed in the library?
- _____ 7. The next skill she wants to learn is flying.
- _____ 8. Snoring really irritates me.
- _____ 9. I always save a little time for napping.
- _____ 10. Have you tried painting?
- _____ 11. I have always enjoyed knitting.
- _____ 12. Drinking can harm your health.
- _____ 13. Her eyes were red from crying.
- _____ 14. Why don't you like diving?
- _____ 15. His worst habit had been speeding.

Just as infinitives can appear in phrase form, so, too, can gerunds. They can be accompanied by direct objects, indirect objects, adverbs, and prepositional phrases. For example:

Writing a theme is difficult for me. (direct object)
Giving her the money was a bad idea. (indirect object)
Talking too loudly got me in trouble. (adverbs)
We always liked sitting on the porch in the evening. (objects of prepositions)

Because gerunds function as nouns, they can be modified by possessive adjectives. Do not confuse the use of pronouns that are modified with present participles with gerunds that are modified by possessive adjectives.

Present Participle as Modifier

He saw me running up the hill.

I watch Jane acting.

I heard them singing.

Speaking quietly, she gave them the news.

Possessive and Gerund as Noun

The coach likes my running.

He's proud of her acting.

Their singing needs some work.

Your speaking quietly will keep him calm.

Exercise 57

Complete each sentence with two gerund phrases formed from the words in parentheses. Write one with the noun or pronoun provided as a possessive adjective; write the second one without the possessive adjective. For example:

She likes . . .

(I / to sing and dance / to sleep late)

She likes my singing and dancing.

She likes sleeping late.

1. Bill heard . . .

a. (you / to complain about the food) _____

b. (to snore at night) _____

2. We really admire . . .

a. (she / to be so courageous) _____

b. (to try to give up smoking) _____

3. Do you enjoy . . . ?

a. (John / to joke about such things) _____

b. (to stroll through the park) _____

4. I hate . . .

a. (they / to gossip about me) _____

b. (to work in such humidity) _____

5. Tina would prefer . . .

a. (we / to visit on another day) _____

b. (to travel to South America) _____

6. We really loved . . .
- a. (he / to act in that play) _____
 - b. (to spend time with you) _____
7. No one liked . . .
- a. (Mary / to punish the boys so much) _____
 - b. (to drink the stale tea) _____
8. I would choose . . .
- a. (you / to cook any day) _____
 - b. (to remain here for the week) _____
9. Why did you dislike . . . ?
- a. (I / to chat with Jim) _____
 - b. (to wear your new suit) _____
10. Mom is so proud of . . .
- a. (she / to be promoted) _____
 - b. (to win the lottery) _____

Subject-Verb Agreement

Choosing a singular verb for a singular subject or a plural verb for a plural subject is called agreement and is generally simple. Because most verbs, except those that follow a third-person singular subject, are identical in the present tense, it is only the third-person singular subject that has to be identified in order to apply the appropriate ending (-s).

Pronoun	to learn	to have
I	learn	have
you	learn	have
he / she / it	learns	has
we	learn	have
they	learn	have

Only the verb to be is more complex, and certain auxiliaries require no ending changes at all. For example:

Pronoun	to be	must
I	am	must
you	are	must
he / she / it	is	must
we	are	must
they	are	must

Certain kinds of subjects require a bit more thought when determining subject-verb agreement.

Verbs and Indefinite Pronouns

Indefinite pronouns are used like other third-person singular pronouns but do not refer to any person or thing in particular. These pronouns begin with four prefixes: any-, every-, no-, and some-.

anybody	everybody	nobody	somebody anyone	everyone	no one	someone
anything	everything	nothing	something

Compare their use with personal pronouns.

He is here.	replaces John is here.
She went home.	replaces Her aunt went home.
It belongs to me.	replaces This hat belongs to me.
They helped out.	replaces My sons helped out.
Does anybody want this?	anybody refers to no specific person
Everyone had a good time.	everyone refers to all the people but none specifically
Nothing is perfect.	nothing refers to no specific object
Someone here is a thief.	someone refers to no specific person but suggests that the thief is among those here

Because an indefinite pronoun is a third-person singular pronoun, it must be used with third-person singular possessive adjectives. Use his when referring to males and her when referring to females. Its is the possessive adjective required for inanimate objects.

Indefinite Pronoun	Possessive Adjective
anyone	his / her everything	its
nobody	his / her something	its

However, it is very common in informal English to use the possessive adjective their in place of his or her.

Formal	Informal
Someone lost his / her book.	Someone lost their book.
No one brought his / her laptop.	No one brought their laptop.

This informal usage does not occur with anything, everything, nothing, and something, which refer to inanimate singular objects and always use the possessive adjective its.

Everything has lost its meaning.
We found something. Its shape is very odd.

Exercise 58

Complete the second sentence in each pair with the correct possessive adjective, based upon the content of the first sentence. Conjugate the verb in parentheses in the second sentence appropriately. For example:

The men are in a crowded room. Someone should (to give) give his seat to the oldest man.

1. All the girls are here. But no one _____ (to have) ticket along.
2. She calls the meeting to order. Everyone _____ (to lower) voice.
3. The men are quiet. Yet every one of them _____ (to hear) heart beating.
4. Something falls on the floor. _____ color _____ (to be) bright red.
5. Someone took my jacket! And _____ name _____ (to be) Jack!
6. Is there anything in the corner? I _____ hear _____ (can) breathing.
7. She asks the boys for their names. But nobody _____ (to provide) ID.
8. How strange. But I suppose everyone _____ (to have) own way of doing things.
9. I called to the girls. "Somebody _____ (to leave) purse here."
10. The teacher stood at the door. Everyone _____ in _____ (to hand) test upon leaving.

When a second clause follows a clause with an indefinite pronoun in it, the second clause requires a singular verb with a third-person singular pronoun.

Someone will get in trouble if he / she is dishonest.

I have something you'll like, and it is made of chocolate.

Anybody who says that he / she understands this formula is lying.

Exercise 59

Complete each relative clause in any appropriate way. Provide a possessive adjective in your clause.

1. I know no one who _____.
2. Have you met anybody who _____?
3. Everyone who _____ can board the plane now.
4. I can't find anyone who _____.
5. Let's ask somebody who _____.

Verbs and Collective Nouns

Some collective nouns describe a single entity doing the same thing and must be used with a third-person singular verb. A collective noun's pronoun replacement is it and its possessive adjective is its.

They have a nice family.

It is quite large.

But in formal style, when a collective group does individual things, a plural verb is required as well as the use of they and their.

Their family took separate vacations. They went their own ways for a month.

Compare these sentences:

One Group Doing the Same Thing

The choir sings beautifully.

(one entity)

Individuals in the Group Acting Alone

The choir are fitted with their new robes.

(the choir members)

However, it is more common in American English not only to use a singular verb with this kind of collective (where individuals in the group act alone) but to use a plural pronoun and possessive adjective as well. For example:

The choir is fitted with their new robes.

The team quits early and goes to their homes.

The class was asked to pick up their new books.

The faculty is told that they each must prepare three tests.

Following are some commonly used collective nouns:

army	firm
audience	group
board	jury
cabinet	majority
class	minority
committee	navy
company	public
corporation	school
council	senate
department	society
faculty	team
family	troupe

Exercise 60

Circle the word in parentheses that best completes each sentence.

1. The crowd ____ cheering for the team. (is / are / were)
2. Our swim team ____ very good although rather small. (is / are / be)
3. The audience clapped loudly. ____ loved the play. (it / they / its)
4. The orchestra is provided with ____ new formal wear. (its / his / their)
5. The navy announced that ____ had sunk the pirate ship. (they / it / her)
6. A majority ____ in favor of the new law. (are / were / is)
7. The jury ____ hear the witness. (don't / doesn't / are able to)
8. The large family now lives in ____ own house. (it / its / their)
9. The company has lost ____ contract with the city. (it / its / their)
10. Which department ____ going to be eliminated? (are / is / will)

Verbs and Noncount Nouns

There is a group of nouns that cannot be counted or named either singular or plural. Such nouns are noncount nouns; in general, they describe a collective or an intangible concept. Although the meaning of such nouns can describe a large quantity of something, they use a third-person singular verb. The nouns can be identified by checking their use with the article a / an. If they cannot be used with the indefinite article, they are noncount nouns.

Used with a definite article: The furniture looks a bit old.

Used with no article: We need to buy furniture.

Makes no sense with a: Where is a furniture? (furniture is a noncount noun)

The following list contains many of the most frequently used noncount nouns:

air	homework
anger	leisure
bread	meat
corn	precision
courage	progress
dust	reading
education	smoke
electricity	software
equipment	steam
fish	sugar
furniture	warmth
gravity	weather
hate	wood

Exercise 61

In the blank provided, write the appropriate present tense conjugation of the verb in parentheses with the subject provided.

1. fish _____ (to have)
2. precision _____ (to be)
3. water _____ (ought to)
4. gravity _____ (to form)
5. software _____ (to be)
6. dust _____ (to make)
7. smoke _____ (to carry)
8. air _____ (to become)
9. meat _____ (must)
10. courage _____ (to need)

Verbs, Complex Nouns, and Quantities

Complex nouns are composed of a noun combined with a subordinate noun by use of the preposition of. For example:

a bottle of water

the book of matches

two cups of coffee

When complex nouns are used as the subject of a sentence, the agreement of the verb is determined by the initial noun (singular or plural) and not the subordinate noun.

Singular

A glass of water is . . .

One bottle of wine has . . .

Plural

Four glasses of water are . . .

Several bottles of wine have . . .

However, if the complex noun expresses a single quantity, the verb is singular. If the complex noun implies that a quantity is composed of individual units, the verb is plural.

Four cups of sugar (in a single bowl) is the correct amount.

Four cups of sugar (in four different cups) are needed.

Other words that express quantities must be looked at carefully when determining whether a singular or plural verb is required. Some of these are as follows:

Singular Verb Required

each of either one of every one of much of one of one-fourth of (or other fraction)

the number of

Plural Verb Required

a number of many of

Singular or Plural Verb Can Be Used

most of

none of (the plural form is considered casual or informal)

some of three-fourths of (or other fraction)

Here are some examples:

Each of the men receives an award.
One-fourth of the students earns a bad grade.

Many of our ideas are considered bad.
A number of the delegates votes "no."

Most of her money is in the stock market.
Some of the girls have to buy new shoes.

Three-fourths of the test is multiple choice.
Three-fourths of the students are getting good grades.

Exercise 62

Complete the following phrases with the present tense of the verb to be.

1. each of you _____
2. either one of the boys _____
3. a spoonful of sugar _____
4. two cups of flour _____
5. none of them _____
6. most of the food _____
7. most of the girls _____
8. a tank of gas _____
9. three-tenths of a yard _____
10. some of the tourists _____

Follow the same directions using the verb to have.

11. some of his money _____
12. many of your friends _____
13. a number of cities _____

14. a fifth of the work _____
15. one of these children _____
16. much of their time _____
17. a bowl of soup _____
18. most of the day _____
19. many of you _____
20. none of the above _____

Follow the same directions using the verb to do.

21. most of it _____
22. the number of hours _____
23. each of us _____
24. four pints of blood _____
25. one of the guests _____
26. either of the sisters _____
27. a pad of paper _____
28. some of them _____
29. some of the article _____
30. both of your friends _____

There Is / There Are

The use of there is / there are is idiomatic and is synonymous with there exists. The noun or pronoun that follows this expression determines the number of the verb. If the noun or pronoun is singular, the verb is singular. If it is plural, the verb is plural.

There is someone here to see you. (singular pronoun)

There is a mouse in the corner. (singular noun)

There are many reasons for his failures. (plural noun)

This expression can be used in all the tenses and with a variety of auxiliaries.

Past: There was a problem with the car.

Present Perfect: There have been numerous complaints.

Past Perfect: Had there been any improvements?

Future: There will be a meeting tomorrow.

Auxiliary: There can be no more discussion about this.

Exercise 63

Circle the verb that best completes each sentence.

1. There ____ a few questions for you. (is / are / was)
2. There ____ anyone to help us. (am not / wasn't / weren't)
3. ____ there any more objections? (Is / Are / Wasn't)
4. How many kinds of cat breeds ____ there? (is / are / has been)
5. There ____ laws against that. (are supposed to be / ought to be / has been)
6. There ____ some candy in that bowl. (are / am / was)
7. Why ____ there so many mistakes made? (is / was / were)
8. I think there ____ someone hiding over there. (wasn't / have been / is)
9. There ____ a new menu posted tomorrow. (will be / had been / has been)
10. There ____ some kind of error. (has to / weren't / must be)

Tenses, Number, and Clauses

Conjunctions make no sense when standing alone. Their function is as connectors. When words, phrases, or sentences are combined by conjunctions, the choice of the tense and number of the verb in the sentence is sometimes affected.

Verbs and Coordinating Conjunctions

Coordinating conjunctions are among the most commonly used and function with all the tenses. These conjunctions are:

and but for nor or so yet

When combining clauses that contain a subject and a verb, the tense of the verb in one clause is often the same in the other clause.

Jack works in London, and Mary works in New York.
The boys will stay home, but the girls will go to the park.
I was worried about them, so I went to the police station.

It is also possible to use a different tense in each clause to specify at what point in time the action of the verb has taken place, is taking place, or will take place.

Jack is working in London now, and Mary will go to New York to work there.
The boys are at home, but the girls have already gone to the park.
I worry about them, so I will go to the police station for help.

Exercise 64

Rewrite the underlined clause in each sentence in the tenses provided in parentheses.

1. I don't worry about her, yet, of course, she has some problems.

(past) _____

(present perfect) _____

(past perfect) _____

(future) _____

2. The room gets cold, so I light a fire in the fireplace.

(past) _____

(present perfect) _____

(past perfect) _____

(future) _____

3. She puts on a sweater, for the temperature is changing.

(past) _____

(present perfect) _____

(past perfect) _____

(future) _____

4. The children like playing outside, but the weather is turning cold.

(past) _____

(present perfect) _____

(past perfect) _____

(future) _____

5. She has no job and is looking for work.

(past) _____

(present perfect) _____

(past perfect) _____

(future) _____

6. The soccer team plays on Saturday, but the golf tournament is on Friday.

(past) _____

(future) _____

7. I don't like your behavior, nor do I approve of it.

(future) _____

8. Do you want to go to the movies, or did you see that film?

(present perfect) _____

(past perfect) _____

When certain coordinating conjunctions combine subjects, the choice of a singular or plural present tense verb must be considered. With the conjunction and, a plural present tense verb is used. With or and but not, the noun or pronoun closest to the verb determines the number of the verb. For example:

Plural Verb

John and I are two men and a little boy have

Singular or Plural Verb

a boy or a girl is the men or the women are a winner or a loser has three girls or two boys have not Tom but Tina is the father but not his children are the teachers but not the student has not the banks but the post offices have

Exercise 65

Complete the following phrases with the present tense of the verb to be.

1. several girls and I _____

2. not Jim but Karen _____

3. a group of tourists and their guide _____

4. Mr. Jones or Ms. Jones _____

5. the husband but not the wife _____

6. not the parents but the children _____

7. our neighbors and our landlord _____

8. not the red car but the blue one _____

9. my relatives or my friends _____
10. a ballerina or a singer _____
11. one lion and three tigers _____
12. one horse or three cows _____
13. four chairs or one table _____
14. not the meat but the fish _____
15. the piano or the organ _____

Verbs and Correlative Conjunctions

Correlative conjunctions comprise more than one word, and those words must function together to make sense. The five correlative conjunctions are:

both . . . and not only . . . but also either . . . or neither . . . nor whether . . . or

Except for both . . . and, when you combine singular and plural subjects with these conjunctions, it is the subject nearest to the verb that determines whether a present tense verb must have a singular or plural ending. For example:

Plural Verb

Both William and Jean live in that building.

Both our brothers and our sisters like life in the big city.

Singular or Plural Verb

Not only Joe but also Helen is a friend of mine.

Not only the boys but also the girls are helping out.

Either Mary or Bill has your wallet.

Either the teacher or the students have caused the problem.

Neither the dog nor the cat is allowed in the living room.

Neither the dog nor the cats are in the basement.

Whether my son or my daughter goes to college is not up to me.
Whether my son or my daughters go to the prom is not up to me.

Verbs and Subordinating Conjunctions

There are numerous subordinating conjunctions. They combine a subordinating clause with a main clause. Unlike the main clause, a subordinating clause cannot stand on its own and make sense. Subordinating conjunctions introduce a clause that describes when the action of the verb takes place, the cause of the action, opposition to the action, and conditional action. Commonly used subordinating conjunctions include the following:

When	Cause	Opposition	Condition
after	because	although	if before	since	though	unless when(ever)	now that	even though	only if while	as	whereas	whether (or not) since	in order that	while	even if until	so		in case that

When you use conjunctions that describe when an action occurs, the same tense is used in both the subordinating clause and the main clause if that tense is a form of the past tense.

After you went to school, I hurried to the store.
Before he had become a doctor, he worked in a drugstore.
I waited on the corner until a bus finally came.

If the present tense is used in the subordinating clause, either the present or the future tense will occur in the main clause.

When you come home, you always do your homework.
Mom takes a nap while the children are at school.

Before he leaves the house, Tom must have a good breakfast.
Until he makes his bed, my son will not be allowed to watch television.

When since means “from that time,” it is used only in the past tense.

Since I met you, I’ve learned so much about music.

Exercise 66

Circle the word or phrase that is the best completion for each sentence.

1. Whenever I ____ out late, I regret it the next day. (have been staying / stay / will stay)
2. Tina ____ the door after Bill gets home. (will lock / has locked / locked)
3. Until the weather changes, you ____ remain in the house. (did / will have to / had)
4. Bob ____ in Florida before he found a job in Denver. (works / will work / had been working)
5. Since Mary ____, we have scarcely spoken to one another. (arrives / will arrive / arrived)
6. We will be sitting in the garden while you ____ supper. (prepare / will prepare / will be preparing)
7. When the door opens, you ____ your new apartment. (saw / have seen / will see)
8. After I shower, we ____ go down to breakfast. (did / can / will)
9. I didn't know what happiness was until I ____ you. (am meeting / will meet / met)
10. Before I give you the money, I ____ you to sign this. (have wanted / want / was wanting)

Conjunctions that introduce a clause that describes the cause of an action can contain a variety of tenses, particularly when the verb in the main clause is in the present tense.

You are afraid because you are in a new situation.
You are afraid because you already had problems with him.
You are afraid because you will have to confront him over this.

I am happy, so I celebrate with a friend.
I have enough money, so I have decided to take a vacation.
I don't like this job, so I will look for a new one.

If the verb in the main clause is in the past tense or the future tense, the tense varieties in the subordinating clause are limited to the past tense and the present tense respectively, especially in clauses introduced by in order that and now that.

Mom was delighted now that Tim decided to go to college.
We will give him some money in order that he can get on his feet.

Exercise 67

Circle the word or phrase that is the best completion for each sentence.

1. I have been lonely since you ____ me anymore. (don't visit / didn't visit / visit)
2. Because you ____ a friend, I will not ask for an apology. (are / was / will have been)
3. Mary began to cry, so he ____ ashamed. (has been / felt / had not felt)
4. Dad is going back to work now that his health ____ good. (was / will be / is)
5. He just gave up as there ____ little he could do. (was / will be / was being)
6. We will visit you in order that we ____ you face-to-face. (see / have seen / saw)
7. Since you lost your job, you ____ borrow money from us. (must have / have to / could have)
8. She trusted you because you ____ a loyal friend. (will be / hadn't been / were)
9. My stomach aches, so I ____ to the doctor. (was going / will go / had gone)
10. Now that the war ____ over, we can get on with our lives. (has been / was / is)

When you use conjunctions that describe opposition, the verbs in both the subordinating clause and the main clause can appear in a variety of tenses.

Even though I have little money, I will buy some new clothes.

Even though I had little money, I bought some new clothes.

Even though I will have little money, I will buy some new clothes.

With conjunctions that set a prerequisite or condition, the verb in the main clause is in the present or future tense, and the verb in the subordinating clause is in the present tense.

We will dine here only if you join us.

You cannot go to the concert unless you clean your room.

Exercise 68

Circle the word or phrase that is the best completion for each sentence.

1. Although the weather ____ warmer, we are going home tomorrow. (is turning / becomes / wasn't)
2. I ____ a new cabin only if you help me. (could build / will build / built)
3. If you are good, I ____ home a surprise for you. (bring / am bringing / will bring)
4. While your words are kind, your voice ____ stern. (was / is / will be)

5. John loves jazz, whereas Mike ____ it. (will play / heard / hates)
6. Whether or not she approves, I ____ to the concert. (went / am going / have been going)
7. Unless you pay your rent, you ____ your apartment. (will lose / had lost / lost)
8. She ____ here even if her sister moves out. (lived / has lived / will live)
9. Though it ____ hard to believe, I passed the test. (is / was / will be)
10. Even though he ____ me, he will not marry me. (loves / is loving / was loving)
11. I ____ here even if you pay me double. (don't work / won't work / haven't worked)
12. Although he ____ I'm right, he insists I'm wrong. (will know / knows / can know)
13. If that ____ true, then Mark is lying to me. (is being / was being / is)
14. Though I can't believe you, I ____ believe you. (am wanting to / want to / will want to)
15. He will stay at his present job unless he ____ into college. (gets / will get / was getting)
16. Sarah is the brightest, whereas Tom ____ the strongest. (was / is being / is)
17. I will come home only if you ____ me. (ask / asked / will ask)
18. While having this job was important, going to school ____ more important. (is / was / is being)
19. These are the facts whether or not you ____ them. (are understanding / understand / understood)
20. Even if Bob ____ the team, we still can't win. (joins / was joining / had joined)

The Verb Get

There are few verbs in English that have the variety of meanings and uses as the verb to get. It has an irregular conjugation.

Pronoun	Present	Past	Present / Past Perfect	Future
I	get	got	have / had gotten	will get you	get	got	have / had gotten	will get he / she / it	gets	got	has / had gotten	will get we	get	got	have / had gotten	will get they	get	got	have / had gotten	will get

The to get verb is frequently used to mean “receive,” “obtain,” or “acquire.”

I just got a letter from Bill. (received)

It's difficult to get information from them. (obtain)

She got her reputation by being honest. (acquire)

To get can also be used to show that someone has had the quality or condition of a person or an object altered or improved.

I got the car repaired.

We need to get the house repainted.

You have to get my father well again.

Similarly, the same verb is used to show that someone provokes another person into a certain action.

I'll get Mr. James to sign the petition.

You should get your father to lend you the money.

And to get can be used as a synonym for to become.

It's getting rather cold.

It is also a synonym for to arrive or to go. It is usually accompanied by a prepositional phrase introduced by to or from.

I got to the hospital on time.

We have to get to my sister's house.

Exercise 69

Circle the word or phrase that best completes each sentence.

1. Why did you get ____ with me? (the weather / angry / so brilliantly)
2. Tom got ____ from Mary. (another letter / a bit warmer / soon)
3. Let's get the car _____. (buying / to sell / washed)
4. Our room is getting _____. (some gifts / nothing / rather hot)
5. When did you get ____? (your new car / from Bill / later)
6. John never gets ____ in time for supper. (right away / home / work)

17. We should get ____ in an hour. (on time / at home / to Toronto)
18. I got _____. (after the play / a note from her / anybody)
19. You'll never get ____ to agree. (the book / anything / her)
20. Get ____! (about your parents / pleasantly / to your room)

To get can mean that someone can supply or furnish another person with something.

I'll get you a ticket to the concert.

Can you get me a can of soda, please?

When it is followed by an infinitive or infinitive phrase, it means that someone is allowed or given the opportunity to do something.

If you're good, you'll get to go to Uncle Bill's house.
No one got to see the play.

Followed by a direct object, it can infer that someone is puzzled or irritated by another person or thing.

His bad behavior really gets me!
Your awful language got mother.

And to get is sometimes used as a synonym for to understand.

Don't you get it?
That man will never get what I said.

When the past tense of to get is combined with to have, it becomes an emphatic form of must or to have to and is followed by an infinitive or infinitive phrase.

I have got to start working on my taxes.
Tina has got to end her fear of flying.

When the same structure is followed by a direct object, its meaning is an emphatic form of to have.

He has got a book of mine.
Have you got any time to help me?

Exercise 70

In the blank provided, write the letter of the phrase that describes how to get is used in each sentence.

Past _____

Present Perfect _____

Future _____

Exercise 72

Circle the word or phrase that describes how to get is used in each sentence.

1. The young family is trying to get ahead. (supply / prosper / become)
2. It got very cold yesterday. (succeed at a criminal act / irritate / become)
3. Mark never gets my jokes. (understand / find out / make understood)
4. We never get to go anywhere. (have the opportunity / cooperate / emphatic have)
5. She has got to stop complaining! (prosper / emphatic must / succeed with little effort)
6. Our train got in very late. (become / receive / arrive)
7. I can get you that for less money. (understand / recover / furnish)
8. What time do I have to get up? (receive / convince / wake up)
9. I have never gotten along with Bob. (cooperate / understand / make understood)
10. She finally got her brother to help her. (provoke someone to act / assemble / arrive)
11. How do we get there from here? (hint / go / succeed at a criminal act)
12. Have you got any aspirin? (succeed with little effort / emphatic have / become)
13. Let's get together with them. (meet / furnish / emphatic must)
14. When did they get their new bikes? (receive / prosper / succeed with little effort)
15. You'll never get by on your salary. (irritate / convince / succeed with little effort)
16. I just can't get over losing my job. (emphatic must / recover / have the opportunity)
17. I don't understand. What are you getting at? (convince / hint / have something done)
18. I got Jim to join the team. (provoke someone to act / prosper / emphatic must)
19. You should get the car washed. (have something done / cooperate / make understood)
20. His story gets stranger with every day. (emphatic have / furnish / become)

Verbs in Relative Clauses

Verbs of any type, of any tense, and of any number can occur in relative clauses. The subject relative pronouns of those verbs are who, which, and that.

There is a tendency to use who and which in nonrestrictive relative clauses. Such clauses provide additional information about the antecedent but are not essential to the basic meaning of the sentence.

Our mayor, who is out of town right now, won reelection last week.
These fabrics, which were manufactured in China, are rather cheap.

The relative pronoun that is used in restrictive relative clauses. Such clauses provide essential information about the antecedent.

The man that lost the election received fewer than two thousand votes.
He has a car that runs on ethanol.

When the antecedent to the subject relative pronoun is an entire main clause, the verb in the relative clause is always in the third-person singular.

He fails his exams, which annoys his father greatly.
She told only the truth, which itself is a lie.

Exercise 73

Fill in the blank with the appropriate form of the verb in parentheses. Some of the antecedents to the relative pronouns are entire main clauses.

1. The weather is awful again, which _____ (mean) we have to postpone the picnic.
2. The woman starts crying, which _____ (cause) me to blush.
3. There is no reason that _____ (be) a justification for this.
4. Mr. Garcia falls to his knees, which _____ (shock) his wife.
5. I finally point to the thief, which _____ (make) the man tremble.
6. We located a ship that _____ (sink) many years ago.

7. The men look for the treasure, which _____ (have to be) on this island.
8. He is beating the old horse, which _____ (horrify) the passersby.
9. They buy the paintings, which _____ (be) almost priceless.
10. Jean receives an award, which _____ (bring) her parents to tears of pride.
11. We spent the night in a motel, which _____ (be) a horrible experience.
12. I have some toys that _____ (be made) in Austria.
13. The old coat needed some buttons, which _____ (be) hard to find.
14. The little girl is sick again, which _____ (cause) her mother much pain.
15. She opens her eyes and smiles, which _____ (bring) a tear to my eye.

The possessive relative pronoun whose cannot stand alone as a subject. It modifies the noun subject of the relative clause, and it is that subject that determines whether a singular or plural verb is required.

We asked the man, whose father was arrested for the crime.
I'd like to meet the girls, whose parents want to arrange the party.

If the antecedent is an inanimate object, of which can replace whose.

The car, whose color is red, is German.
The car, the color of which is red, is German.

When the relative pronoun is a direct or an indirect object, or an object of a preposition, it is the subject of the relative clause that determines the verb in the relative clause.

I recognized the man that we met at your party. ("that" = direct object, "we met" = subject and verb)
That's the lady to whom she often sends flowers. ("whom" = object of to, "she sends" = subject and verb)

Exercise 74

Circle the verb or verb phrase that best completes each sentence.

1. The teacher, whom I _____ so much, is Ms. Allen. (knew / respect / likes)
2. That's the student that Jean _____ so much. (knew / respect / likes)
3. The fire, whose causes _____ under investigation, is under control. (was / is / are)

4. The people, whom Phillip ____ met yet, are from Ireland. (hasn't / haven't / won't)
5. The blanket, the size of which ____ too large, was returned. (was / were / are)
6. We bought the puppies, whose mother ____ become so weak. (have / wants to / has)
7. Here's the poem, which I ____ trying to understand. (are / is / am)
8. Jim collects insects that ____ rare to this region. (are / is / am)
9. I met the singer, whose brothers ____ in the band. (were / has been / is singing)
10. She cut me a piece of the cake that your sisters _____. (is baking / had baked / bakes)
11. Bob hurt his knee in the game, which ____ his poor mother. (frightens / frightened / have frightened)
12. This is the soldier, from whom we ____ e-mails. (are receiving / is receiving / receives)
13. Look at that leaf, which four ladybugs ____ sitting on. (is / wants to be / are)
14. Dad reads the newspaper that he ____ from New York. (gets / buy / have sent)
15. I lent her the novel that I ____ telling her about. (were / was / am)

When the antecedent of a relative clause describes a moment in time, a place, or a reason for an action, the relative pronouns become when, where, and why. These three relative pronouns cannot be used as the subject of the relative clause and are used adverbially. The subject will be another word in the relative clause and will determine the form of the verb.

I recall the day when I first saw Mary. ("I saw" = subject and verb)

This is the house where Beethoven once lived. ("Beethoven lived" = subject and verb)

He has no explanation why this occurred. ("this occurred" = subject and verb)

Exercise 75

Fill in the blank with the appropriate word: when, where, or why.

1. I want to find a place ____ I can feel comfortable.
2. This is the kind of room ____ a pool table could be set up.
3. It was on our anniversary ____ Robert gave me some pearl earrings.
4. She has no clue ____ the refrigerator stopped working.
5. They lived in a village ____ everyone knew everyone.
6. Do you have an answer ____ you stayed out so late?
7. Tom placed his luggage on the floor in the den, ____ Mom was napping.
8. They arrived on Sunday ____ we were still at the mall.

9. There was no justification ____ she failed the test.
10. We'll meet again in the future ____ I've become a success.
11. There will be a time ____ you'll finally trust me.
12. She came to the park, ____ a rally was taking place.
13. Can you explain the reason ____ you won't come to my party?
14. It happened in January ____ the temperature was below zero.
15. They sat near the fireplace, ____ the room was the warmest.

Use that as the relative pronoun when the antecedent in the main clause is all, anything, everyone, everything, few, little, many, much, nothing, none, someone, or something. If that is used as the subject of the relative clause, the verb is generally a third-person singular, except following all, few, many, and sometimes none. If that is an object in the relative clause, the verb is determined by the subject of the relative clause.

That as Subject

I have spoken with all that are here. (all refers to people)

This is all that is available. (all refers to a collective of objects)

There are many that say I am wrong. (that say = subject and verb)

She has nothing that has any value. (that has = subject and verb)

We interviewed none that speak English. (none refers to a group of people)

Tom finds none that is appropriate for us. (none means "not a single one")

That as Object

I can't find anything that you might like. (you might = subject and verb)

There is still much that we want to do. (we want = subject and verb)

John gave me something that I treasure. (I treasure = subject and verb)

Exercise 76

Rewrite the underlined relative clause of each sentence in the tenses shown.

Reflexive Verbs and Reciprocal Pronouns

Reflexive Verbs

Reflexive verbs are those that have a subject and an object that refer to the same person or thing. Unlike most other European languages, English has only a few true reflexive verbs. Some examples are absent oneself, bestir oneself, and perjure oneself. These verbs make no sense unless they are accompanied by one of the reflexive pronouns that correspond to the personal pronouns.

Pronoun	Absent Oneself	Perjure Oneself
I	absent myself	perjure myself
you (sing.)	absent yourself	perjure yourself
he	absents himself	perjures himself
she	absents herself	perjures herself
we	absent ourselves	perjure ourselves
you (pl.)	absent yourselves	perjure yourselves
they	absent themselves	perjure themselves

Note: the reflexive pronoun for it is itself; the reflexive pronoun for one is oneself.

Certain other English verbs require a direct object, and if that object is the same person or thing as the subject, a reflexive pronoun is used. For example:

Direct Object	Reflexive Pronoun Object
I enjoy the party.	I enjoy myself.
He hurt the girl.	He hurt himself.

The tense of a verb does not change the use of a reflexive pronoun that accompanies it.

Exercise 77

Fill in the blank with the appropriate reflexive pronoun. Then rewrite each sentence in the tenses shown.

1. We blame _____ for the problem.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

2. I behave _____ rather badly.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

3. You (pl.) enjoy _____ at my party.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

4. She doesn't control _____.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

5. Are they washing _____?

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

6. Mary and I amuse _____ with a game.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

7. They pride _____ on their looks.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

8. You (sing.) guard _____ against danger.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

9. His mother braces _____ against a chair.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

10. I don't really like _____.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

Many other verbs can use a reflexive pronoun as their object: a direct object, an indirect object, or an object of a preposition. Reflexive pronouns are never used as subjects.

Reflexive Pronouns as Direct Objects

I see myself in the mirror.

He found himself in a strange place.

We washed ourselves in the lake.

Reflexive Pronouns as Indirect Objects

Have you finally bought yourself a new comb and brush?

She sent herself an e-mail as a reminder.

They found themselves some good seats in the third row.

Reflexive Pronouns as Objects of Prepositions

Tom chose it as a gift for himself.

Is she talking to herself?

The guests were chatting among themselves.

Exercise 78

Combine the words provided into a sentence. Use the verb in the present tense and add a reflexive pronoun. For example:

we / see / in the mirror

We see ourselves in the mirror.

1. John / need / some medicine / for

2. I / do not / permit / to smoke

3. she / buy / a new dress

4. they / be interested / in

5. the boys / behave / so well

6. why / Mary / send / flowers / ?

7. you (pl.) / must lend / some money

8. the professor / be thinking / to

9. the players / be / proud / of

10. why / you (sing.) / blame / ?

11. the old man / give / a birthday present

12. we / should not / speak / of

13. you (sing.) / send / a reminder

14. he / call / a winner

15. it / raise / off the ground

The action of a verb can imply that the action is carried out by the subject alone by using a reflexive pronoun. The reflexive pronoun is placed at the end of the sentence.

She made the blouse herself. (It was made by her alone.)

Jim put up the tent himself. (It was put up by Jim alone.)

When a reflexive pronoun follows the preposition by, the prepositional phrase tends to stand at the end of the sentence and means “on one’s own” and “without help.”

The little boy opened the jar by himself. (He did it on his own.)

When the reflexive pronoun stands next to the subject, the meaning tends to be that the subject is carrying out the action of the verb “personally.”

The boss himself fired Mr. Johnson. (The boss fired him personally.)

I myself identified the thief. (I identified him personally.)

Exercise 79

Rewrite each sentence in the past tense, and add a reflexive pronoun that shows that the action of the verb was carried out by the subject alone.

1. My brother and sister repair the car.

2. We take care of the little children.

3. I bake a cake.

4. She struggles against the current.

5. Do you (sing.) build these toys?

Follow the same directions, but let the reflexive pronoun mean “on one’s own.”

6. The baby crawls across the floor.

7. No one can survive here.

8. Do they carry the heavy timbers?

9. You (pl.) stack the firewood.

10. My sister and I carry the suitcases.

Follow the same directions, but let the reflexive pronoun mean “personally.”

11. We draw up a new contract.

12. I spend no money on gambling.

13. Jack regrets the argument.

14. Can you (sing.) take responsibility for it?

15. They don’t understand this illness.

Reciprocal Pronouns

The reciprocal pronouns are one another and each other; the meaning of the two phrases is identical. When the subjects of two different sentences carry out the action of the same verb, the two sentences can be combined as one by means of a reciprocal pronoun. If the subjects are singular, the verbs in the two sentences are singular. But when the sentences are combined, the verb must be made plural.

John loves Mary. Mary loves John.

John and Mary love one another. John and Mary love each other.

The cat chases the dog. The dog chases the cat.

The cat and the dog chase one another. The cat and the dog chase each other.

If the verbs in the two sentences are already plural, the verb in the combined sentence remains plural.

The boys tease the girls. The girls tease the boys.

The boys and the girls tease one another. The boys and the girls tease each other.

Exercise 80

Combine the following pairs of sentences by using a reciprocal pronoun.

1. You care for me. I care for you.

2. The men joke with the boss. The boss jokes with the men.

3. The squirrel hides from the raccoon. The raccoon hides from the squirrel.

4. Bob doesn't like Jim. Jim doesn't like Bob.

5. The old elk challenges the young elk. The young elk challenges the old elk.

6. I smile at you. You smile at me.

7. The women don't see the men. The men don't see the women.

8. His story contradicts your story. Your story contradicts his story.

9. Michael helps the tourists. The tourists help Michael.

10. He likes me. I like him.

Passive Voice and Stative Passive

Passive Voice

The passive voice contains many of the same elements as the active voice. Active voice sentences that have a direct or an indirect object can be changed to the passive voice. That object becomes the subject of the passive sentence, and the active verb becomes a past participle accompanied by the auxiliary to be.

Active

Bill finds a wallet.

I will rent a small car.

Passive

A wallet is found by Bill.

A small car will be rented by me.

The subject of the active sentence becomes the object of the preposition by in the passive sentence.

Given that there are two ways to form the present and past tenses, there are two forms of the present and past tense passive voice.

the car is repaired

the book was read

the car is being repaired

the book was being read

The progressive form (the book is being read) occurs only in the present and past tenses of the passive voice.

The passive voice occurs in all tenses. For example:

Present:

the book is being read

a house is built

Past:

the book was being read

a house was built

Present Perfect:

the book has been read

a house has been built

Past Perfect:

the book had been read

a house had been built

Future:

the book will be read

a house will be built

Future Perfect:

the book will have been read

a house will have been built

Exercise 81

Rewrite each present tense passive sentence in the tenses shown.

1. The keys are lost by her.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

2. My car is stolen by a thief.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

3. She is being watched by someone.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

4. Who is arrested by the police?

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

5. I am being chased by a bear.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

6. The duck is shot by a hunter.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

7. The window is smashed by a rock.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

8. The candle is blown out by the wind.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

9. We are praised by our boss.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

10. Is Laura being stopped by the guard?

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

When changing an active sentence to the passive voice, the tense of the active sentence becomes the tense of the passive sentence. For example:

Past:	He broke the mirror.	The mirror was broken by him.
--------------	----------------------	--------------------------------------

Future:	Tom will buy the car.	The car will be bought by Tom.
----------------	-----------------------	---------------------------------------

Exercise 82

Rewrite each active sentence in the passive voice.

1. They have taken an oath.

2. Mark is watching the birds.

3. I borrow her car.

4. Jean will sing a song.

5. The men had brought a bottle of wine.

6. The mechanics were checking the engine.

7. A new company published his novel.

8. Did he hurt the puppy?

9. Mary wrote several postcards.

10. We have not painted the bedroom.

11. The best students will attend this school.

12. The American tourists were touring France.

13. Who repaired the door?

14. The professor finds something interesting.

15. The landlady is opening the windows.

16. He purchased a new couch.

17. Bill paid the bill.

18. They had not heard the new CD.

19. Both of us will clean the kitchen.

20. I recommended the movie.

If an active sentence contains both a direct and an indirect object, either one can become the subject of the passive sentence. However, if the direct object becomes the subject of the passive sentence, the indirect object becomes the object of the preposition to or for.

Active Sentence

He gave them a book. ("them" = indirect object, "a book" = direct object)

Passive Sentences

They were given a book by him. ("they" = subject)

A book was given to them by him. ("a book" = subject)

Exercise 83

Rewrite the following active sentences as two passive sentences: once with the direct object as the subject and once with the indirect object as the subject.

1. Mark sends the girl a bouquet.

2. We have brought her some magazines.

3. Mr. Locke will buy each of us a candy bar.

4. The mayor gives me an award.

5. The store shipped Mary the wrong dress.

It is common to omit the prepositional phrase introduced by the preposition by in a passive sentence. This is often done to avoid mentioning who or what is carrying out the action.

Active

Mr. Jones fired everyone.

He is painting two bicycles.

Passive

Everyone was fired.

Two bicycles are being painted.

The omission of the phrase that follows by also occurs when the subject of the active sentence is some vague entity: they, one, people, someone, and so on.

Active

They grow coffee here.

People remember him well.

Passive

Coffee is grown here.

He is remembered well.

Exercise 84

Rewrite each active sentence in the passive voice and omit the phrase that follows by.

1. Someone threw a rock at him.

2. People will never understand his poetry.

3. This was causing a terrible problem.

4. One took too much time.

5. They had warned us before.

6. That will leave a bad scar.

7. People have built the houses close together.

8. They visit the memorial every summer.

9. Will they plant the wheat in this field?

10. Some person was eating my lunch.

Stative Passive

In Chapter 10 it was illustrated how past participles can be used as adjectives. The stative passive looks like the regular passive voice, but the past participle in the stative passive is used as an adjective and not as a verb. The stative passive is seen most clearly in the present or past tense or in a sentence that omits the prepositional phrase introduced by the preposition by. The progressive form usually indicates the passive voice is being used.

Passive Voice

The car is being repaired by Mr. Garcia.

The window was broken by our neighbor's son.

Stative Passive

The car is repaired. (It is in a state of good repair right now.)

The window was broken. (The window is no longer broken.)

To test for the stative passive, substitute a true adjective (such as new) for the past participle. If the sentence makes sense, the past participle is in the stative passive. For example:

The car is being new by Mr. Garcia. (makes no sense)

The window was new by our neighbor's son. (makes no sense)

The car is new. (makes sense—is stative passive)

The window was new. (makes sense—is stative passive)

Exercise 85

In the blank provided, write the letter P if the past participle in the sentence is in the passive voice. Write the letter S if the past participle is in the stative passive.

- ___ 1. John was taken to the hospital in an ambulance.
- ___ 2. The windows are being washed today.
- ___ 3. The children were not allowed to play in the alley.
- ___ 4. Bob is being fired by the new manager.
- ___ 5. The flower garden is finally planted.
- ___ 6. The lawn is freshly mowed.
- ___ 7. We have been given two tickets to the concert.
- ___ 8. The fence was being painted white.
- ___ 9. Is the house painted?
- ___ 10. The team will be trained by a new coach.
- ___ 11. My skirt is ripped!
- ___ 12. The drapes are being cleaned.
- ___ 13. All my socks and underwear are washed and darned.
- ___ 14. The problem was solved by a committee.
- ___ 15. The cows were being herded into a pen.

Passive Voice and Modals

The future tense auxiliaries (will and shall) are followed by an infinitive in the future tense or by the infinitive have and a past participle in the future perfect tense.

I shall work in the garden.
 You will not understand.
 They will have arrived by 7 P.M.

The same auxiliaries are used to form the future tense of the passive voice: shall or will followed by a passive voice infinitive (to be + past participle).

We shall not be harmed by that.
 They will be arrested.

The passive voice is also used with other auxiliaries—the modal auxiliaries, which are followed by a passive voice infinitive (to be + past participle). (See Chapter 4 for a review of the modal auxiliaries.) Any variety of auxiliaries can be used with passive voice infinitives. For example:

To Be Found

it must be found it could not be found it ought to be found

To Be Helped

they can be helped they want to be helped they should be helped

Exercise 86

Rewrite each passive phrase with the modal provided in parentheses.

1. we are persuaded (can) _____
2. I am coached (be allowed to) _____
3. she is taught (ought to) _____
4. he is punished (had better) _____
5. you are rewarded (must) _____
6. they are fined (could) _____

7. he is guided (have to) _____
8. it is fixed (need to) _____
9. they are introduced (be supposed to) _____
10. who is elected (wish to) _____
11. they are reminded (have got to) _____
12. I am married (be to) _____
13. you are surrounded (may) _____
14. that is undertaken (might) _____
15. we are admired (used to) _____
16. it is proved (would) _____
17. she is fired (have to) _____
18. they are presented (should) _____
19. I am flattered (wish to) _____
20. he is kissed (like to) _____

Remember that it is the auxiliaries that can change tense or number, and the passive voice infinitive remains static. It does not change from its infinitive form.

Present: Mary wants to be invited to the party.

Past: Mary wanted to be invited to the party.

Present Perfect: Mary has wanted to be invited to the party.

Past Perfect: Mary had wanted to be invited to the party.

Future: Mary will want to be invited to the party.

Exercise 87

Rewrite the following present tense sentences in the tenses shown. Place an X in the space where a tense change is not possible.

1. I have to be hired for the job.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

2. You ought to be fired.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

3. She isn't able to be reached by phone.

Past: _____

7. The meat is supposed to be roasted.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

8. The dog doesn't like to be bathed.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

9. She wants to be dressed as a queen.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

10. Her poems may be published.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past perfect: _____

Future: _____

Active voice sentences that contain a modal auxiliary can be changed to the passive voice. When they are, the tense and number of the modal auxiliary determines the tense and the number of the passive sentence. For example:

Active

She can write it.

Passive

It can be written by her.

A word of caution: Although active voice sentences that contain a modal auxiliary can be changed to the passive voice, this is not always appropriate, because the meaning and intent in the active sentence can seem awkward or even absurd in the passive sentence.

Active

She wanted to buy the books.

He wishes to sell the car.

Passive

The books wanted to be bought by her. (absurd)

The car wishes to be sold by him. (absurd)

This awkward or absurd meaning is apparent with inanimate subjects (the books, the car). But even though animate subjects make more sense with certain modal auxiliaries, the meaning of the passive sentence is not identical to the active sentence.

Active

She wanted to kiss Bill.

He wishes to meet Mary.

Passive

Bill wanted to be kissed by her.

Mary wishes to be met by him.

In the active sentences just illustrated, the subjects are showing a desire to do something: She wanted to kiss / He wishes to meet. However, in the passive sentences the desire to do something is attributed to the subjects of the passive sentences: Bill wanted to be kissed, Mary wishes to be met. With these modal auxiliaries, the meanings of the active sentence and of the passive sentence are not identical even though the sentences still make sense.

Exercise 88

Rewrite each sentence with the three modal auxiliaries provided in parentheses.

1. It cannot be done. (should, be to, must)

2. The floor needs to be mopped. (be supposed to, ought to, had better)

3. Mr. Peters wanted to be paid. (wish to, could, have to)

4. Did you have to be punished? (should, would, need to)

5. Mark doesn't like to be annoyed by his sister. (be supposed to, may, must)

6. The problem can be solved. (be able to, need to, might)

7. It must have been lost. (ought to have, could have, may have)

8. This document is not allowed to be copied. (could, be supposed to, ought to)

9. He liked to be complimented for his looks. (used to, wish to, should have)

10. It could have been broken by your son. (must have, would, might)

Subjunctive Mood

The subjunctive mood is used to express a wish, desire, supposition, contingency, or condition. The conjugations for the English subjunctive are relatively simple. The present subjunctive is formed from the infinitive of a verb, and each person has the same verb form.

Pronoun	to be	to have	to know
I	be	have	know
you	be	have	know
he / she / it	be	have	know
we	be	have	know
they	be	have	know

The past subjunctive is formed from the simple past tense of a verb, and that verb can be either regular or irregular. Each person has the same verb form.

Pronoun	to be	to have	to go	to like
I	were	had	went	liked
you	were	had	went	liked
he / she / it	were	had	went	liked
we	were	had	went	liked
they	were	had	went	liked

Note: the past subjunctive of to be uses only the plural were. The verb was is not used in the subjunctive conjugation.

Exercise 89

Write the present and past subjunctive forms of the verbs in parentheses with the subjects provided.

1. I _____ (to help)
2. we _____ (to see)
3. they _____ (to make)
4. it _____ (to do)

5. Michael _____ (to want)
6. she _____ (to be)
7. you _____ (to warn)
8. the men _____ (to spend)
9. he _____ (to drink)
10. who _____ (to laugh)
11. she _____ (to have)
12. I _____ (to eat)
13. he _____ (to grow)
14. I _____ (to be)
15. you _____ (to carry)
16. we _____ (to catch)
17. they _____ (to allow)
18. the women _____ (to be)
19. you _____ (to cut)
20. he _____ (to sing)

In many cases both the present and past subjunctive are identical to the present and past tenses of the indicative. The exceptions are the verbs to be and to have. For example:

Present and Past Indicative	Present and Past Subjunctive
I look / I looked	I look / I looked
we see / we saw	we see / we saw she is / she was	she be / she were he has / he had	he have / he had

If the indicative and subjunctive are identical, it is the usage of a verb that identifies it as subjunctive.

Present Subjunctive

The present subjunctive is used to describe the action of a verb in a clause that follows the verbs ask, command, demand, insist, propose, recommend, request, and suggest. The present subjunctive is also used when it follows a phrase that suggests what is important or necessary.

Her boss requested that she be on time from now on.
I suggest he spend more time studying.
It's important that she begin from the beginning once again.

Exercise 90

Look at each sentence and determine whether a present subjunctive verb is required. Then circle the verb that best completes each sentence.

1. I speak with the man who _____ across the street. (reside / lives / have bought)
2. Bob recommended we _____ this movie. (see / saw / have seen)
3. Tom suggested it _____ made a rule. (was / is / be)
4. Everyone helped the man _____ his old car. (was pushing / pushes / push)
5. The prince commanded that his servant _____ a meal. (prepare / makes / served)
6. I gave the suggestion that you _____ hired. (be / were / shall be)
7. She had to request that John _____ singing. (begins / stop / continued)
8. No one recommends that you _____ so much. (are eating / orders / drink)
9. We ask Mr. Phelps to _____ with the luggage. (help / carried / finds)
10. Everyone must _____ a bit quieter. (were / be / was)
11. I _____ recommend a good hotel nearby. (be / have / can)
12. Bill suggests Tim _____ his own problems. (solve / were / was)
13. Who requested the meeting _____ postponed? (is / have / be)
14. Ms. Walker demanded that the man _____ her purse. (steals / stole / return)
15. I must insist that he _____ with the others in the group. (were / sits / remain)
16. The lawyer proposed we _____ a new contract. (sign / arranged / are developing)
17. He asked that the judge _____ merciful. (is / be / was)
18. No one should _____ so much. (worry / be / spent)
19. The manager demanded he _____ the bill immediately. (will change / pay / charges)
20. I ask that his book _____ published. (is / were / be)

Past Subjunctive

It is common to use the past subjunctive in clauses that are introduced by if and as if, in clauses that follow a wish-clause, or in a clause introduced by the imperative of the verb suppose.

I would be more careful if I were you.
John acted as if he understood the poem.
She wishes Bill were home from work.
Suppose Mary came here now. What would you say to her?

It is possible to infer an action in the present by using the simple past subjunctive.

She wishes he were home. (now)
I wish you had good health. (now)

By using a verb in a perfect tense structure (have + past participle), an action in the past can be inferred.

She wishes he had been home for the party. (The party was in the past.)
I wish you had had better health then. ("then" = a time in the past)

This occurs with if-clauses as well.

If only I had seen you there yesterday.

Exercise 91

Fill in the blank with the appropriate subjunctive form of the verb provided in parentheses.

1. Mary acts as if the money _____ to her. (to belong)
2. They acted as if Jim _____ a stranger. (to be)
3. I wish I _____ more money. (to have)
4. If only you _____ spend more time with us. (can)
5. Brian was smiling as if he _____ the answer. (to know)
6. Mom wishes he _____ harder last year. (to study)
7. If our daughter just _____ a little closer to us. (to live)

8. Suppose it _____ to rain. (to start)
9. If that _____ only true. (to be)
10. I always wished I _____ in America as a child. (to live)
11. The girls played as if it _____ a championship game. (to be)
12. Suppose I _____ you what she really said. (to tell)
13. If only we _____ years ago. (to meet)
14. The boy wishes he _____ a puppy. (to have)
15. Martin bragged as if he _____ English fluently. (to speak)

In sentences that contain two clauses combined by if, it is often the case that the subjunctive is expressed in one of the clauses by use of the auxiliary would and another verb. And if the imperative suppose introduces a sentence, it is common for it to be followed by a sentence that also uses the auxiliary would and another verb.

If Bill saw this letter, he would be very angry.
 I would believe you if you hadn't lied before.
 Suppose you had a thousand dollars. What would you do?

The perfect tenses are used with these structures to infer an action that occurred in the past.

If Bill had seen this letter, he would have been very angry.
 I would have believed you if you hadn't lied before.
 Suppose you had had a thousand dollars. What would you have done?

An if-clause sets a condition for an action in the present or past, and its accompanying clause shows the result of that action.

Condition	Result
If John were here (now),	he would help us (now).
If John had been here (in the past),	he would have helped us (in the past).

If an auxiliary is used in sentences such as these, the auxiliary is formed in the past subjunctive and the word would is omitted. For example:

If John could be here, he would help us.
 If John had been here, he could have helped us.

Exercise 92

Combine the following sentences with if to form a subjunctive sentence that sets a condition and provides a result. For example:

They like tomatoes. I make a salad.

If they liked tomatoes, I would make a salad.

1. We are in Mexico. We go shopping every afternoon.

2. You have a down payment. You can buy this car.

3. The weather is better. The boys go hiking.

4. My family lives in the capital. I visit the museums every day.

5. The plane lands early. We can get downtown by 5 P.M.

6. She catches a plane. She may be in New York by dusk.

7. I understand your language. I am happy to chat with you.

8. You sleep longer. You have more energy.

9. The circus comes to town. We go there every day.

10. Tom enjoys chess. He gladly plays with me.

Rewrite the ten subjunctive sentences you have just written to infer that the action has taken place in the past. For example:

If they liked tomatoes, I would make a salad.

If they had liked tomatoes, I would have made a salad.

11. _____
12. _____
13. _____
14. _____
15. _____
16. _____
17. _____
18. _____
19. _____
20. _____

Special Expressions

There are several unique expressions that are stated in the subjunctive. Many of them are quite old, coming from a time when English used the subjunctive more extensively. Look at the following list and observe where the present and past subjunctive forms are used.

As it were, I cannot help you.

Be that as it may.

Far be it for me to criticize you.

God bless America!

(God) bless you! (response to someone sneezing)

God rest ye merry gentlemen . . . (from a Christmas song)

God save the Queen!

Heaven forbid!

I agree, come what may.

If I were you, I wouldn't do that.

If need be.

Long live the king!

So be it.

Suffice it to say, this is no solution.

The truth be told, he simply lied.

Till death do us part. (said during marriage vows)

Would that it were so.

Exercise 93

Circle the phrase that is the best completion for each sentence or the best response to it.

1. I hope grandfather is finally getting better. (If need be. / Would that it were so. / Heaven forbid!)
2. _____, he had been in prison twice before. (Till death do us part / Far be it for me / The truth be told)
3. You are now an American citizen! (God bless America! / If I were you. / As it were.)
4. I'm ready for anything, _____. (come what may / be that as it may / long live the king)
5. _____, I wouldn't use such language. (If I were you / If need be / Come what may)
6. _____ to try to correct your pronunciation. (Would that it were so / Far be it for me / As it were)
7. John wants to quit his job and move to Greenland. (Come what may. / Suffice it to say. / Heaven forbid!)
8. Our friendship is over. Good-bye. (So be it. / If need be. / Bless you!)
9. _____, you're the smartest student in this class. (Suffice it to say / Would that it were so / God save the queen)
10. You'll have to give up your scholarship and go to work. (If need be. / As it were. / If I were you.)

When have is added to certain auxiliaries, the past subjunctive meaning is understood and suggests an action that is a possibility, a desired outcome, or imaginary.

I could have been a pilot.
She might have become a ballerina.
You ought to have listened to me.
Laura must have overslept again.
We should have taken the train there.

In many cases, the same phrase can be used with a variety of auxiliaries.

It could have been a success.
It might have been a success.
It ought to have been a success.
It must have been a success.
It should have been a success.

Exercise 94

Rewrite the sentences with the auxiliaries provided in parentheses. Change the action to mean an action that is a possibility, a desired outcome, or imaginary.

1. I read the entire novel. (could, ought to, must)

2. We are living in Spain. (could, might, should)

3. Dad repairs the truck. (might, must, should)

4. The girls memorize the poems. (could, must, should)

5. He doesn't sell the cabin. (ought to, must, should)

Functions of Phrasal Verbs

Phrasal verbs play a significant role in the English language. They can be identified by two characteristics: (1) a verb is accompanied by adverbs or prepositions in a phrase, and (2) the meaning of that phrase is generally quite different from the individual meaning of the words in the phrase.

For example, the verb to come means “arrive” or “move toward.” When the verb is followed by a prepositional phrase and its meaning does not change, it is proof that it is not a phrasal verb.

Come at seven o'clock. (Arrive at seven o'clock.)

Come to the window. (Move toward the window.)

But when the meaning of the verb changes, it is a phrasal verb. For example:

He came up to the window and looked in. (He approached the window and looked in.)

The woman finally came to. (The woman finally regained consciousness.)

In these two examples, the prepositions up (came up) and to (came to) are functioning as adverbs.

There are hundreds of phrasal verbs in the English language, but only a few will be illustrated and practiced here. They will act as the pattern for other phrasal verbs.

Phrasal Verb	Meaning
to ask out	to invite for a date to back up	to drive a car backward; to support or defend to be in / out	to be at / away from home or in / away from the office to drop off	to deliver to give up (on)	to stop trying; to admit failure in a relationship or an activity to go into	to explain; to enter a profession to head for	to move in the direction of a place to let on (about)	to divulge information about someone or something to put up with	to bear, endure to set out (on, for)	to begin a journey; to begin a journey with a destination to take down	to write, note
to throw up	to vomit
to turn down	to refuse
to warm up to	to become gradually friendly
to write off	to give up hope on someone or something

Exercise 95

Rewrite each sentence in the tenses shown.

1. Present: Martin backs up the SUV.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Future: _____

2. Present: Jim asks the new girl out.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Future: _____

3. Present: Is Dr. Garcia in today?

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Future: _____

15. Present: I don't write off our team this year.

Past: _____

Present perfect: _____

Future: _____

Passive Voice

Just like other transitive verbs, phrasal verbs that are transitive can appear in the passive voice. For example:

Every comment was taken down in his own shorthand.

When will the new books be dropped off?

Why are my ideas being written off as worthless?

Exercise 96

Rewrite each active sentence as a passive sentence. Retain the tense of the original sentence.

1. The chauffeur is backing up the limousine.

2. Brian will ask out the French girl.

3. The judge had written off my statement.

4. The manager has turned down their offer.

5. He wrote off his old friend as hopeless.

Modals

Just as modals can act as auxiliaries to other verbs, so, too, can they act as auxiliaries to phrasal verbs. For example:

You shouldn't give up on him so easily.

I can't put up with your behavior any longer.

We ought to set out on the hike by dawn.

Exercise 97

Rewrite each sentence with the modals provided in parentheses.

1. I was in by midnight. (should, should have, have to)

2. She tries to warm up to him. (must, can, need to)

3. You head for the coast by noon. (should, ought to, want to)

4. Does he throw up in the car? (need to, have to, could have)

5. She doesn't always put up with him. (could, like to, may)

6. Mary is out for the day. (might, be supposed to, must have)

7. Bill doesn't let on about his new job. (should, must, can)

8. Where do they drop off their laundry? (should, have to, should have)

9. The driver backs up here. (can, could have, want to)

10. The clerk takes down the man's testimony. (need to, ought to have, could)

Adverb Position

In certain phrasal verbs, the position of a preposition used as an adverb is not static. For example, the phrase to work up means “to prepare or compose.” The preposition up in that phrase can stand either before or after a noun direct object. But if the direct object is a pronoun, the preposition can only be placed after the pronoun.

I can work a new report up for you. (noun as direct object)

I can work up a new report for you. (noun as direct object)

I can work it up for you. (pronoun as direct object)

Here is another example, with the phrasal verb to lay off (“to fire,” “to dismiss”):

The boss laid five people off. (noun as direct object)

The boss laid off five people. (noun as direct object)

The boss laid them off. (pronoun as direct object)

Exercise 98

Use the string of elements provided to write two sentences, and place the preposition in each sentence in the two positions possible. Write a third sentence with the direct object noun changed to a direct object pronoun, and place the preposition in the appropriate position.

I / to fill out / form

I fill out the form.

I fill the form out.

I fill it out.

1. he / to back up / car / into the street

2. John / to ask out / pretty girl

3. mother / to drop off / children / at school

4. to take down / injured man's statement

5. little boy / never / to turn down / candy

8. Suppose it suddenly _____ to snow. (to start)
9. If that _____ only true. (to be)
10. He always wished he _____ in the country as a child. (to live)

Exercise 106

Rewrite the sentences provided with the auxiliaries in parentheses. Change the action to mean an action that is a possibility, a desired outcome, or imaginary. For example:

She speaks with John. (should)

She should have spoken with John.

1. He reads the small print. (could, ought to, must)

2. I am living in luxury. (could, might, should)

3. My sister fixes the radio. (might, must, should)

4. The girl memorizes Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. (could, must, should)

5. We don't sell our car. (ought to, must, should)

Exercise 107

Look at each sentence. If the word in bold is used as a preposition, write the letter P in the blank. If it is used as an adverb, write the letter A in the blank.

___ 1. He wrote with a piece of chalk.

___ 2. Bill came up to the woman.

- ___ 3. I should send out for some burgers.
